Not responsible for escapee's act

Son, daughter of slain couple return inmates' $821.50 check

SALEM, Ore. (UPI) — The son and daughter of an elderly couple believed to have been slain by an escaped convict returned a check Thursday for $821.50 sent to them by a group of prisoners. They said they appreciated the gift, but told prisoners they should not feel responsible for the act of one inmate.

"We realize the sacrifices you people have made on our behalf in raising this money and the symbolism of it has been truly heartwarming," the pair said in a note to the 108 prisoners of Oregon State who collected the donation.

"We wish to express to you, the residents (of the prison) that you should in no way feel responsible nor share the guilt for the action of one man," wrote the pair, Linda Kerschbaum, 25, of Seattle, and John Hunter, 34, of Toronto.

The criminal they referred to was jailbreaker Carl Cletus Bowles, who was charged in Spokane, Wash., Tuesday with the deaths of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Hunter.

"Perhaps the Hunter fund could be used in memory of our parents to help some particular victim of crime who desperately needs financial assistance," the Hunter children said when they returned the money gathered in the prison Bowles' had escaped from.

Deodorant soaps too effective for our safety?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Deodorant soaps may do more harm than good by destroying too many germs, according to a two-year study by the Food and Drug Administration.

The report, still in draft form but due to be published for public comment within the next two weeks, calls into question a whole series of germ killers found in soaps, first aid creams and other anti-microbial products.

The result could be that many soaps will have to prove they are safe and some may have to change their formulas.

Some germs on the skin serve a "protective function" and if too many are wiped out in the name of smelling good, worse ones may take their place, the study panel concluded.

"It is possible that contrary to what might be expected from an anti-microbial product, that certain bacterial infections due to gram negative and streptococcal organisms might be increased rather than decreased," the report said.

"If this were true the deodorant benefit would probably be considered outweighed by the potential hazard.

"In addition because these chemicals are absorbed into the blood stream, the panel is concerned about the prudence of exposing the entire body surface to these chemicals when alternative methods of odor control are available."

The report is part of the FDA's review of all over-the-counter drugs. During the course of the study, as evidence came to light, soap makers dropped suspect ingredients such as hexachlorophene and tribrinalan.

The study recommends that even the minute amount of hexachlorophene now allowed for preservative reasons be banned and that tribrinalan also be outlawed.

Hexachlorophene has been linked to brain damage while the other substance can cause a person's skin to become so sensitive to light that he would be turned into what one FDA official called a "human vampire" —able to roam outside only at night.

Strikes hard at food stamp program

Reagan proposes welfare overhaul

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — Gov. Ronald Reagan today proposed a "Blueprint for National Welfare Reform," including a major overhaul of the "abuse riddled" federal food stamp program for the needy.

If the retiring two-term Republican governor's recommendations were adopted nationwide, aides said, the savings to taxpayers would total between $2 billion and $2.7 billion annually.

"The food stamp program has become a national scandal," Reagan said. "Like many aspects of the welfare system in a number of states, it has gotten completely out of control all across the nation."

In a 70-page report prepared for the federal Departments of Agriculture and Health, Education and Welfare, Congress, governors and the 1975 legislature, Reagan recommended:

—Prohibiting striking workers from receiving food stamps unless they were eligible before they walked out.

—Requiring able bodied college students to be subject to the same employment requirement as any other food stamp applicant.

—Transfering the food stamp program from the Department of Agriculture to the Department of Health, Education and Welfare and requiring the federal government to take over full responsibility for aid to aliens.

—Establishing a minimum age for food stamp recipients and allowing local welfare departments to alert parents when their minor or student children apply for the stamps.

—Attaching the wages of federal employes who fail to make child support payments and requiring that military absent fathers forward their housing allowances to their families.

In all Reagan, who led the drive to reform welfare in California, three years ago, proposed a laundry list of 65 recommendations in his "Blueprint for National Welfare Reform."

Reagan, until recently a leading contender for the 1976 Republican presidential nomination, commissioned two "task forces" last year to investigate the food stamp program and the Aid to Families with Dependent Children welfare category. The recommendations were based on their findings.

State Benefit Payments Director David Swoap said if the recommendations were carried out, $270 million a year would be saved in California in federal, state and local taxes. Nationwide the savings could total between $2 billion and $2.7 billion, he estimated.

"Riddled with abuses, the whole program is a multibillion dollar administrative nightmare, taking up two-thirds of the Agriculture Department's budget," Reagan said in a speech prepared for a breakfast of Sacramento area civic and government leaders.

"From what we have discovered in our review, "he said, "the amount of fraud and abuse is probably enormous."

He noted the program was launched by the Kennedy administration in 1961 as an experimental project involving 367,000 people and costing $26 million.

"It has become a loosely run operation that by the middle of next year will be offering a welfare subsidy to 16 million people at a cost exceeding $4 billion," he said.

The governor called for stricter food stamp eligibility rules, asserting that allowing strikers to obtain the coupons "makes government a partner on one side of labor disputes rather than a referee."

Terming current rules "ridiculous," he said one college coed was exempted from the work requirement because she was enrolled in an accredited "witchcraft" course.

Administration officials during the past few months had released some findings of the investigators and Reagan himself announced several recommendations at a meeting of Young Republicans at Lake Tahoe last month.

A LINK WITH THE PAST

Delegates from the 13 original states crowd into Philadelphia's Carpenters Hall, site of the first meeting of the Continental Congress in 1774, for a "Reconvening of the First Continental Congress." The three-day event will close Saturday with an address by President Ford.

Forget cooling trend, temps are going up!

A cooling trend that was expected to bring temperatures down by a few degrees isn't going to happen. Instead, temperatures will climb upward near 100 degrees over the weekend.

Forecaster Ron Hamilton of the National Weather Service said temperatures will start climbing by a few degrees today. The hot weather will be accompanied by moderate smog in valley communities.

Both Los Angeles and San Bernardino county air pollution control districts advise that valley residents stay indoors and curtail physical activity and driving during these smog conditions.

Hamilton said very hot weather is typical for the first two weeks in September here and said the hottest temperature ever recorded in Pomona was 110 degrees on Sept. 6, 1955. He said this record-breaking heat was caused by a Santa Ana condition and weather records reveal that the heat was also accompanied by heavy smog on the 1955 date.

Hamilton said this would surprise some people who think that smog is a recent problem.

Oil import bill okayed; Demo role hit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Democrats pledged Thursday to help President Ford fight inflation, but within hours the Senate passed an oil import bill which opponents claim would make the problem worse by boosting the price of oil.

The Democrats asked Ford not to wait until next year to take action on the economy and vowed to keep Congress in session through the end of the year if necessary.

Meeting privately, they unanimously approved a resolution pledging to work with Ford this year to come up with a new economic program to curb inflation and give the economy a new boost.

"We shouldn't wait, we can't wait until January," said Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash. "We are in a business recession and we're in a financial depression."

Congress has been aiming for a mid-October adjournment date but Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield said the way the economy is going, "The chances are better than even" that Congress will return after the elections.

Later in the day, the Senate approved a bill to require that part of U.S. oil imports be carried in American tankers.

Sen. Norris Cotton, R-N.H., chief opponent of the bill, said American crews make more money, and other factors would push the cost of oil higher at a time of inflation.

RTD, bus drivers huddle again today

Spreading strikes idle thousands across nation

By United Press International

Miners, bus drivers, auto workers and teachers were off their jobs and on the picket lines today in strikes than affected hundreds of thousands of people.

Ignoring a federal judge and their own union leaders, hundreds of miners did not go to work today in sympathy with a school textbook protest in Charleston, W. Va.

"Most of them are still out," said a spokesman for the Kanawha County Coal Operators' Association.

The United Mine Workers told miners to go back to their jobs and a U.S. District Court judge issued a temporary restraining order to halt picketing at area mines, but many miners stayed home in sympathy with the book protest.

Many mines were closed for the second day Thursday.

About 100 miners at Eastover Coal Co.'s Highsplint Mine in Harlan, Ky., also were off their jobs Thursday.

The walkout started Wednesday when some miners became upset that their job assignments had been changed. They contended the switches were made because they picketed in sympathy with the 13-month strike at the nearby Brookside Mine, scene of a bitter union struggle.

Local 696 of the United Auto Workers union struck the Delco-Moraine plant in Dayton, Ohio, in a dispute over unresolved grievances.

Local officials said the strike was called because of a lack of progress in two weeks of negotiations aimed at solving grievances over production standards at the plant.

Negotiations between striking bus drivers and the Rapid Transit District in Los Angeles were scheduled for today with a state conciliator.

More than 3,000 drivers have been on strike for 26 days. Gov. Ronald Reagan Thursday called on the United Transit Union to submit the district's latest wage offer to a membership vote.

Teachers strikes mushroomed across the nation, giving some 280,000 students an extended vacation and leaving about 10,000 teachers off their jobs.

Storm Japan's embassy

South Koreans on a rampage

SEOUL (UPI) — Hundreds of angry South Koreans stormed the Japanese Embassy in Seoul today in a wild spree of violence, smashing windows and desks, hurling ink across the building and setting fire to a jeep.

At the height of the rampage, several youths tore off their shirts and plunged knives into their stomachs in suicide attempts, police said. Two were rushed to a hospital.

Police said 200 demonstrators tore through police lines and ransacked the embassy to protest the attempted assassination last month of President Park Chung-hee.

Japanese Ambassador Torao Ushiroku was inside the building but was unharmed, police said.

Park expressed regret over the incident and instructed Home Minister Park Kyongwon to severely punish the ringleaders, government spokesmen said.

Park also ordered Foreign Minister Im Dong-jo to convey Korea's regret to the Japanese Embassy. He said all property damage would be compensated for.

The hour-long clash was the latest in a series of anti-Japanese outbursts following the assassination attempt against Park on Aug. 15.

The president was not injured, but his wife was killed in the attempt. A Korean living in Japan was arrested for the shooting. South Koreans charged Japanese officials have not investigated the plot thoroughly.

The protesters tore down an embassy signboard, pulled the Japanese flag from atop the four-story building and ransacked the first floor, police said.

It began when about 700 persons gathered around the embassy carrying anti-Japanese placards and chanting slogans.

About 200 youths broke through police lines, smashed the embassy gate and stormed into the building. Some set fire to a blue jeep in the embassy compound, police said.

Riot police fired tear gas into the crowd but failed to stop the protest. Police reinforcements were brought in and hauled the demonstrators bodily from the building.

Tree barbecue too hot to handle; firemen get call

Pomona firemen and a crew from the Parks and Recreation Department spent several hours Thursday afternoon trying to put out a fire in a hollow tree that had been used as a barbecue.

Firemen said the large, hollow tree in front of the residence at 839 S. Garey Ave., had apparently been used on other occasions to barbecue food. Bricks had been placed at the bottom of the hollow tree to fashion a homemade barbecue.

The owners of the house were not at home at the time the fire in the tree was noticed by neighbors. A crew from the Parks and Recreation Department had to cut away most of the tree.

Also on Thursday, children playing with matches may have caused another fire that burned a storage shed containing valuable antiques, fire officials said.

Don Beck of 1470 Prospect Dr., told firemen the metal shed was used to store antiques. Firemen estimated the loss to the contents and structure at $5,300.

Several books of matches were found near the shed, firemen said.

A faulty air conditioning unit may have been the cause of a fire Thursday morning at the residence of Kelly Puddock, 1231 E. Pasadena St. The occupant wasn't at home at the time the fire was discovered by neighbors.

Damage to the living room is estimated at $4,000.

Demo candidate asks probe of vote registration charge

Bill McVittie, Democratic candidate in the 65th Assembly District, has requested the San Bernardino County sheriff and district attorney to conduct a "complete investigation" on charges that he acted illegally in a voter registration drive.

"We want this completed as quickly as possible so we can go ahead with our campagin," he said.

McVittie, a Chino attorney, was accused in an Ontario newspaper of illegal registration practices because his campaign organization offered to pay deputy registrars a 40 cent bonus for every Democratic voter registered. The deputy registrars receive 10 cents per voter registered from the county.

The bonus paid, according to the Ontario Daily Report, is a violatin of a state attorney general's opinion, issued in 1962.

McVittie said some confusion over the matter may result from different codes in Los Angeles and San Bernardino counties, Los Angeles County does have a code section prohibiting this, while San Bernardino County does not.

McVittie said his staff had contacted the county counsel's office and was assured the bonuses didn't violate the county code and that a deputy counsel wasn't aware of any state statutes that might be violated.

But the assistant county counsel insisted that he had told McVittie that he was advising him only on county codes and McVittie should further check with the registrar of voters office and also on state laws.

William Clinton, registar of voters, said today he had not been contacted by McVittie's headquarters.

"We are aware of the attorney general's opinion. This is the only thing we have as a guideline. Our office was not contacted on the payment," he said. "The opinion is clear in that you don't pay a bonus for a particular party."

Clinton said he had released the names of some 20 deputy registrars located in the West End of the county to the sheriff's office.

Meanwhile, Sheriff's Inspector Floyd Tidwell reported an investigation is "being started." He said Sheriff Frank Bland is making assignments and directing the investigation personally.

"The time needed for the investigation will depend on how many people we have to interview," he added. The information will be submitted to the district attorney's office.

McVittie reported that 20 deputy registrars had received $92 over a period of several weeks for these registrations. "There is no way a person will be bribed for 40 cents."

Health restored

DETROIT (UPI) — Teen-ager Siham Hasan, given less than a year to live recently by doctors in her native Syria, got a clean bill of health at Harper Hospital Thursday.

The girl's uncle, Mohammed Elfaki, who operates a beer and wine store here, paid for her trip earlier this year so she could be treated by specialists for a heart ailment.

Security tightens in slaying trial of valley farmer

The jury in the murder-conspiracy trial of karate master James Mitose, 57, and his wife, Dorothy, 62, was expected to get the case for decision today under increased security in Los Angeles Superior Court.

Mitose and Mrs. Mitose were accused in the death March 19 of wealthy San Dimas strawberry farmer Frank Namimatsu, 65, in Namimatsu's Los Angeles home.

Security was increased in the courtroom Wednesday after Mitose, his head now shaven, began pounding on the counsel table during the closing statements of Deputy Dist. Atty. Louis Ito. Several 6-foot deputies and two in plainclothes were added.

Plans today called for Judge Leslie W. Light to instruct the jury on the verdicts available to it and then the submission of the case.

The prosecution maintains that Mitose and his wife conspired with a karate student of Mitose's, Terry Lee, 27, to kill Namimatsu and Namimatsu's wife, Toshiko, 61.

Lee, a former Marine, already has pleaded guilty to second-degree murder in the strangulation and beating of Namimatsu. He testified for the prosecution.

Ito claimed that the Mitoses ordered Namimatsu's death because Namimatsu was going to police to complain about $100,000 Ito claimed the Mitoses swindled the Namimatsus out of with a phony medical cure.

Mitose, who claims to be a Buddhist priest, is hearing the case through a court-appointed Japanese translator.

Baby found dead near bed

An autopsy has been ordered to determine the cause of death of an 8-month-old Pomona child at his home.

Daniel Lee Freeman was discovered early Thursday morning lying on the floor of a bedroom at 759 N. Caswell Ave. Police reported he was found by his father, James E. Freeman, 31, and that he had been dead for at least an hour.

Freeman told police that his wife, Wanda, had placed the infant on the bed an hour or so earlier. The child was found lying on the floor between the bed and the wall.

VALLEY BRIEFS

Two young Ontario brothers were injured when they crashed into a car and were thrown from their bicycles on Eighth Street near Marin Avenue in Ontario Thursday afternoon.

Terry Scott Hardin, 13, and Jimmy David Hardin, 7, of 1574 E. Seventh St., Ontario, according to police, were riding their bicycles the wrong way on Eighth Street when they suddenly swerved right, into the path of a car driven by Harold Frederick Basenberg, 19, of 1472 N. Grove Ave., Upland.

Terry this morning was listed in good condition with a broken left leg in San Antonio Community Hospital. Jimmy, was treated at the hospital for minor injuries and later released to his parents.

Man seeks stomach remedy, also money

A gunman robbed the Friendly Corners Market, 902 E. California Blvd., Ontario, of a small amount of cash Thursday evening.

Police said a man, described as a Caucasian, 25 to 30, 5 feet 8, with a large nose and a mustache, and wearing a dark blue jacket, walked into the market and asked the cashier George Sloss, 19, of Upland for a bottle of stomach remedy. Sloss said he got the bottle and turned around to be confronted by the man holding a short-barreled revolver. The robber ordered Sloss to hand over the cash from the register. The robber took the money and fled.

Portable generator stolen at city yard

Ontario police this morning were investigating the theft of a $1,500 portable generator from the Ontario City Yards at 640 E. Main St. Wednesday night.

City employes reported the generator stolen about 8:30 a.m. Thursday after coming to work. The generator, made by Homelite, is red, 2-by 2-feet, and weights about 125 pounds.

2 found with tires and battery arrested

Two men were arrested on burglary charges by Upland police after they were seen leaving Zurn Engineers Co. at 1500 W. Ninth St. with a battery charger and four tires late Thursday night.

Kenneth Douglas Sullivan, 20, of Highland was arrested on suspicion of burglary and his alleged accomplice, Forest Alan Bunch, 18, of Rialto, was arrested on suspicion of first degree burglary by Upland Police Officer Steve Foulks.

Police said that an Upland resident on Montrose Avenue called the police dispatcher about 11:56 p.m. to report two men acting suspiciously near the engineering company. Foulks found the two men in a car and placed them under arrest after he saw four tires and a battery charger inside.

Police said the suspects admitted they found a door unlocked at the business and entered. However they denied cutting several locks on a door.

Woman at laundry says she was robbed

An Ontario woman complained to police Thursday night that a man stole her purse containing a small amount of cash at the Wishing Well Laundromat at 204 W. Francis St.

Mrs. Jo An B. Walker, 48, of Ontario told police she was washing clothes with her two daughters about 8:30 p.m. when one of two Negro men asked her for change. She said she gave him change for a quarter and the man walked off. She laid her purse down and continued washing.

Mrs. Walker said the man returned and grabbed her purse.

Both the thief and the second man fled the laundromat on foot.

Police said both men were Negroes. One was about 22, 6 feet 1, 170 pounds wearing a long-sleeved, horizontal striped burgundy and green shirt with a fuzzy ski hat. The other was about 20, 5 feet 10, 155 pounds, was wearing a red flowered and white shirt and a knit watch cap.

Valley man wins Emmy for TV sound mixing

A valley man has collected the TV industry's top prize for his work.

George E. Porter of 1383 W. Cypress Ave., San Dimas, won an Emmy Award for best sound mixing at the annual awards program of the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences in New York Wednesday night.

Porter's award was for "Journey to the Outer Limits" on the National Geographic Society Show on ABC. He was also nominated for three other Emmys: for "The Baboons of Gombe" on Jane Goodall's World of Animal Behavior show, ABC; and "South to Fire and Ice" and "The Flight of the Penguins," both on The Undersea World of Jacques Cousteau on ABC.

Porter has been in sound mixing for some 25 years. He is employed by Ryder Sound Services of Hollywood.

He and his wife returned from the awards ceremony Thursday and on Friday he was back at work on another project.

"It's just one picture after another," Mrs. Porter said this morning, laughing. "Then hopefully back to New York again next year."

A frank and open disagreement

The inflation battle: how to wage it?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Economist Walter W. Heller looked across the massive table and told the President his economic ideas were narrow, old fashioned, perhaps naive.

Around the table, 48 others looked on. Television cameras caught the scene, photographers took pictures, reporters took notes.

Heller said President Ford was looking only at inflation — "Public Enemy No. 1" —and not at the simultaneous ache of economic stagnation.

The government would have to do more than simply cut its budget and tighten its belt, he said. "We can't let inflation fill the whole field of our vision:"

He looked Ford in the eye.

"This may go against your free market grain, Mr. President," he said, and continued the lecture —the Wage-Price Stabilization Council "needs clout," Ford must use "the club in the closet" to control business and labor appetites.

Ford could not let the budget bear the entire burden of coping with an inflation caused by other factors —food shortages, an oil cartel, and two devaluations of the dollar.

Ford should cut payroll taxes for workers, tax auto horsepower to save gasoline, increase taxes on the rich, Heller said.

"If we just declare a total war on inflation without taking care of the casualties, we're going to feel a backlash," he said.

He said as a Democrat he was almost reluctant to give such advice —it would elect Ford in 1976. If Ford ignores the advice, he said, the economists would be called back next year "for the second annual economic conference."

Ford listened without comment, and without flinching. He called on George P. Shultz, former treasury secretary. Shultz disagreed with most of what Heller had said.

He offered another prescription. "I'm distressed to see the wage-price controls head stick up again," he said, "I thought we learned that lesson."

Before Washington starts telling businessmen when they cannot raise prices and workers when to forego raises, he said, perhaps it should confer with businessmen and workers.

There was no anger in the moment, no tension. It was a frank, open disagreement over what course the government should take to cope with the worst peacetime rate of inflation in U.S. history.

Ford showed no impatience with the conflicting advice, promising to read the transcript of that part of the discussions he missed in the daylong meeting in the East Room.

It was a White House scene the nation had never seen before. If aides disagree with the chief executive, they do so privately. Here were advisers openly, bluntly talking to a President, disagreeing among themselves.

The clash of ideas occurred at the first of 12 pre-summit meetings to be held here and in seven other cities over the next three weeks, climaxing Sept. 27-28 at the national summit conference on inflation.

They generally agreed that the double-digit inflation rate is likely to decline next year but not by much, perhaps to a high, single digit rate —7, 8 or 9 per cent —but only at a price of continued national doldrums.

Unemployment, now 5.2 per cent, they said, would creep upward to over 6 per cent. That could mean nearly a million more people out of work this time next year.

As for solutions, little agreement. Conservatives stayed with their answers, liberals with theirs. Conservative Milton Friedman of the University of Chicago argued for less government intervention in the economy.

"The American citizen is not getting his money's worth for the roughly 40 per cent of his money that is being spent for him by state, local and federal governments," he told Ford.

Arthur Okun of the Brookings Institution summarized the meeting for Ford. Most of those present agreed the Federal Reserve Board —whose chairman, Arthur Burns, skipped most of the day's debate — should ease up on money controls, allowing banks to lend more, allowing interest rates to fall, so as to get the home building industry out of its depression.

Some felt banks should be compelled to lend a portion of their funds to home buyers, even if they could earn more by lending elsewhere.

As for cutting the federal budget, Okun summarized, the group mostly doubted that Ford's projected $5.5 million cut would achieve much.

The stress was "on discipline, realism, long-range control" of the budget, and away from "accounting gimmicks" which claim non-existent savings.

Inflation must be attacked on all fronts simultanously, Okun said.

The last of the three preliminary contests will be held tonight at the convention hall on the Boardwalk here.

U.S., Cuba take step to end hostility

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Cuba and the United States have initiated high-level diplomatic contacts in Switzerland in an attempt to end the long official hostility between Washington and Havana, diplomatic sources said today.

The sources said Cuba's Foreign Minister Raul Roa was meeting with U.S. officials in Bern. The State Department expressed surprise at the report and said it had not instructed the U.S. ambassador to Switzerland to meet with Roa.

This latest development on the rapidly-moving Cuban matter was learned as the Organization of American States (OAS), at the request of Costa Rica, Venezuela and Colombia, officially asked the 23-nation body to set in motion a process that may lead to the lifting in early November of the sanctions imposed on Cuba 10 years ago.

The OAS council will meet Monday to consider the request and at the same time constitute itself into what it termed a "Meeting of Consultation".

A number of Latin American foreign diplomats will be in Washington for another meeting on Sept. 19.

The council, acting as an "Organ of Consultation," will then inform a foreign ministers meeting scheduled to be held in Quito, Ecuador, Nov. 11, whether or not the sanctions should be lifted.

The drive to end the OAS embargo, which began several months ago in Latin America, is believed to have a good chance of success. It is understood to have the tacit approval of the administration.

Group to try second time to remove Reinecke

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The People's Lobby has gone to court for a second time in an attempt to start proceedings to remove Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke from office.

The citizens' activist group filed suit in Superior Court to require Attorney General Evelle Younger to permit it to sue for Reinecke's removal.

Reinecke was convicted July 27 in Washington, D.C., on perjury charges for statements he made to a senate committee concerning International Telephone and Telegraph Company's attempts to lure Republicans to San Diego for their 1972 national convention.

Younger earlier refused to grant permission for the People's Lobby to sue. A hearing on the new action will be held Sept. 16.

Expects to be indicted, says account

Nixon reported 'terribly depressed'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former President Nixon is "terribly depressed" and expects to be indicted for his role in Watergate, according to a newspaper account today quoting friends of Nixon.

The story, appearing in the Washington Post, was in sharp contrast to recent statements by Julie Nixon Eisenhower that her father was in "good spirits."

The Post reported that friends in California say Nixon hopes a pardon from President Ford will spare him a long ordeal in the courts.

The dispatch, from San Clemente, Calif., where Nixon has been in nearly total seclusion since his resignation Aug. 9, did not identify the friends.

They were quoted as saying Nixon's legal future was a "touchy subject" that is "not easily broached to him, not even by the lawyers."

"He's terribly depressed, with much to be depressed about," one friend was quoted as saying. "Anyone would be depressed in his situation."

"I don't mean he's going off the deep end," the friend was quoted as saying. "I just mean that everything happened to him, seemingly all at once, and he doesn't know what to do about it."

The Post said the picture of the President painted by those who have seen and talked to him since his return to California "is a gloomy one."

"He awakens early in the morning when the high fog that will burn off later in the day still shades the bluff below Casa Pacifica," the paper reported. "He breakfasts on orange juice and a poached egg served him by the valet who still calls him 'Mr. President.'

"He wanders alone or with his friend, Bebe Rebozo, along Red Beach out of sight of the Secret Service men who out of his hearing refer to him as 'the old man' and try to stay out of his way. Sometimes he rummages through the stacks of unanswered mail ... or disconsolately plays the piano."

The Post reported one of Nixon's friends says the former President's mind "seems to wander when he talks." It said that friend uses the term "absent-minded," and emphasizes he is not suggesting that Nixon is unwell.

This picture was sharply different from the one drawn by Mrs. Eisenhower Wednesday night in an interview, when she said her parents were "doing fine —really well ... and Dad is in good spirits."

Ford, other national leaders pay final tribute as Gen. Abrams is laid to rest

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford stood solemnly before a flag-draped coffin today as he and a large number of other national leaders paid a final tribute to Gen. Creighton W. Abrams, the first Army chief of staff to die in office.

Gathering inside the modernistic Ft. Meyer chapel adjoining Arlington National Cemetery, Ford and other civilian government officials were joined by scores of generals in formal black uniforms for the Roman Catholic funeral service.

Abrams, born a Protestant, was converted to Roman Catholicism in 1970 while serving in Vietnam. It was his widow's faith.

Col. John Benson, the chaplain who gave the last rites to Abrams on his death bed, officiated at the service. He said death came to Abrams "all too quickly and all too soon —the time is never right." Benson is a long-time personal friend of the Abrams family.

After the service, the riderless horse, Raven, led a slowmoving, black artillery carriage bearing the body to the gravesite in Arlington for burial.

Among the honorary pallbearers were Ellsworth Bunker, the former ambassador to South Vietnam with whom Abrams worked in Saigon while he was commanding U.S. troops there, and Maj. Gen. George S. Patton III, son of the World War II general, who gave Abrams some of the most challanging assignments of that war.

Abrams died Wednesday 11 days before his 60th birthday. He succumbed to complications three months after surgeons removed a cancerous lung.

Abrams made a name for himself in World War II as the tough and gruff lieutenant colonel who led Gen. George S. Patton's lead battalion in the breakout from Normandy after D-Day and in the relief of Bastogne during the Battle of the Bulge.

Abrams epitomized his hardfisted boss who said, "I'm supposed to be the best tank commander in the Army. But I have one peer —Abe Abrams."

Unlike Patton, Abrams understood where feisty combativeness ended and finesse and diplomacy took over. He led federal troops during integration crises in Alabama and Mississippi in the early 1960s and said that "was a time when you didn't use a sledge hammer when a tack hammer would do better."

He replaced Gen. William C. Westmoreland as commander of U.S. forces in Vietnam in 1968. He was in charge of preparing the South Vietnamese Army to take over the entire fighting role and organized the American withdrawl.

Two years ago he became chief of staff and instituted a major campaign to trim useless jobs from the Army. His openly declared goal was to take the Army from its present 13 divisions to 16 divisions without asking Congress to expand its size.

Defense Secretary James R. Schlesinger admired Abrams as he does few others in the Pentagon. He called the general "one of our authentic national heroes" and lamented that Abrams would go largely unacclaimed because it fell to him to serve at the top in a war Americans would prefer to forget.

Reagan signs bill on smog devices

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Gov. Ronald Reagan has signed legislation to virtually abolish a $35 smog device installation requirement for nearly two million used cars in California registered outside the smoggy South Coast Air Basin.

The new law, signed by Reagan Thursday, eliminates the requirement that 1966-70 used cars be equipped with the devices. The installation is keyed to the final license plate digit. The requirement will remain in the six-county basin.

U.N. dead honored

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — Secretary General Kurt Waldheim Thursday honored 36 members of the United Nations peace keeping forces killed recently in Cyprus and the Middle East.

"The service of peace is an arduous pursuit, and it can also be a dangerous one," Waldheim said after laying a wreath under the memorial plaque for U.N. members killed in service.

"The peace keeping forces of the United Nations represent the objective will for peace and conciliation of the international community."

Governor in movie

BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI) — Gov. Edwin Edwards is making his movie debut as a gambling dandy in the film "Mandingo."

While Edwards was being fitted for his costume Thursday, executive producer Ralph Serpe explained to the governor his role would be part of a gambling scene.

"I can handle that," said Edwards, who sometimes goes to Las Vegas to try his luck on the dice tables.

Edwards said he was given a small part in the movie as a favor for his help in bringing the filming to Louisiana.

Gloomy message from U.N. chief

World's choice: order or chaos

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — Secretary General Kurt Waldheim has called on the nations of the world to choose between "order and chaos" or face the destruction of modern civilization.

Waldheim, in a gloomy "state of the world" message, said Thursday all the earth's nations are facing a "crisis of extraordinary dimensions."

He said many great civilizations "collapsed at the very height of their achievement because they were unable to adjust to the new situations which faced them."

"Today the civilization which is facing such a challenge is not just one small part of mankind —it is mankind as a whole," the secretary general said.

In his annual report to the General Assembly, Waldheim said the United Nations has to play a greater role in world affairs because no single nation or bloc could solve the problems.

"We are reminded every day of how thin the margin is between order and chaos, between sufficiency and desperate want, between peace and annihilation," Waldheim said.

He said the world's population has "the right to be disturbed about the disregard of individual rights, the threat of total war, the decline in civility or the bleakness of the economic outlook."

"There is a great deal that can be done to control these threats and to build a new society which is more resistant to them," he said. "It is in this direction that the challenge to the United Nations lies."

Waldheim called for "a more decisive breakthrough" in limiting nuclear weapons and suggested establishing international controls on peaceful atomic explosions.

"The existence of widespread nuclear know-how and plutonium and the proliferation of nuclear explosion devices could create almost unimaginable dangers for the survival of our civilization and the human race," he said.

He said "the emergence of scarcities, rampant inflation and the acute problems of world food supply are grim reminders that failure to sustain international action may easily put in question the actual survival of millions of people."

Nation's crime rate resumes upward climb

WASHINGTON (UPI) — After a one-year respite, the nation's serious crime rate has resumed its 17-year upward spiral.

The FBI reported Thursday that major crimes in the United States rose 6 per cent in 1973 after going down 4 per cent in 1972.

Attorney General William B. Saxbe called it "discouraging," but predicted the trend would turn downward again next year.

"I think people are becoming more conscious of crime," Saxbe said. "That goes a long way."

Saxbe said potential victims are becoming more cautious, police are getting more adept, and judges are cracking down on repeaters.

The figures were contained in the FBI's annual "Uniform Crime Report," a compilation of seven standard types of crime reported by law enforcement agencies: murder, forcible rape, robbery, aggravated assault, burglary, larceny and auto theft.

Rape was up most sharply, at 10 per cent. Robbery increased the least, only 2 per cent.

But Saxbe was more optimistic. Although he called the war on crime "a failure of substantial dimension —harsh, bitter and dismaying" in a Chicago speech last week, he said Thursday, "The incidence of crime will decline; maybe not in 1974, but in 1975."

The report said the 4 per cent drop in 1972 was followed by a 1 per cent decrease in each of the first two quarters of 1973, leading to hopes that the upward trend had been reversed permanently.

But the rate of serious crimes rose 1 per cent in the third quarter and spurted upward by 16 per cent in the last three months to show an average annual increase of 6 per cent, it said.

The accelerated rate of climb continued into 1974, an FBI spokesman said.

It was growing at a 15 per cent rate during the first quarter of this year, and while second quarter figures are not yet complete it may still be rising, he added.

The FBI made no attempt to explain some of the figures, such as the chart which showed that purse snatching had been in a steady climb to an increase of nearly 50 per cent in 1971 over 1968, but then showed a sharp, unexplained drop to about 6 per cent above 1968 for both 1972 and 1973.

The crime reporting system is not geared to show why such variations might occur, a spokesman said.

Greek, Turkish Cypriot leaders meet for talks

By United Press International

Leaders of the Greek Cypriot and Turkish Cypriot communities met on the truce line that crosses Nicosia today for peace talks hours after rifle and mortar fire rocked the capital before dawn.

Cyprus President Glafkos Clerides, head of the Greek Cypriot majority, and Vice President Rauf Denktash, leader of the Turkish Cypriot minority, met at 4 p.m. (10 a.m. EDT) to discuss a prisoner exchange and problems of the estimated 200,000 people on the island who have lost their homes or means of livelihood in eight weeks of warfare.

Clerides and Denktash smiled as they shook hands for the news cameras when they met at the bullet-pocked Ledra Palace hotel. It was their first meeting since the Geneva peace talks broke down Aug. 14 and the Turkish invasion force on the island launched a two-day blitz.

The talks had been delayed by atrocity charges and truce violations.

U.S. delegation comments

Chou's condition worsens

By United Press International

Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., said in Peking today the condition of Chinese Premier Chou En-lai has worsened during three months of hospitalization for a heart ailment.

"But I don't think you ought to read into that report anything such as that his condition is critical," Humphrey said in a telephone interview with United Press International.

Humphrey, a member of a congressional delegation on a 10-day tour of China, said Vice Premier Teng Hsiao Ping told the group of the condition of Chou, 76, a prime architect of U.S.-China detente.

"If he were not ill, the premier would be happy to see you," Humphrey quoted Teng as saying. "But he is not well and is more ill now than at the time of Sen. (Henry) Jackson's visit two months ago.'"

Humphrey said the Chinese official "mentioned that Jackson (D-Wash.) visited Chou in the hospital but that is not possible now because his (Chou's) condition has slightly worsened," Humphrey said.

In an earlier interview with the Mutual Broadcasting network, Humphrey said, "The apparent candor with which the vice premier spoke indicates he (Chou) is quite ill."

Rep. Barbara Jordan, D-Tex., another delegation member, said two Communist party officials were summoned from a Thursday night banquet, setting off speculation the departure had something to do with Chou's condition.

In comments to Houston radio station KPRC, she said officials in Peking made it clear U.S.-China ties would remain intact no matter what happens to Chou because "the relationship is constant."

The New China News Agency, in a broadcast monitored in Hong Kong, said Chou missed a meeting between Communist party Chairman Mao Tse-tung and Togo President Gnassingbe Eyadema.

China watchers said it was believed to be the first time Chou skipped such a meeting. Chou began his withdrawal from frontline political and administrative duties last April.

Tough on aged; portends controls

Medical costs rising at record rate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Record-breaking increases in doctor bills and hospital costs are making it very hard for the poor and the aged to get by, says Caspar Weinberger, secretary of Health, Education and Welfare.

Since economic controls were lifted April 30, physicians' fees have increased 19.1 per cent a year and hospital charges 17.7 per cent, he said, while inflation for the whole economy was increasing 12.5 per cent.

"Even during the medical cost inflation which followed the introduction of Medicare and Medicaid, increases in doctor bills came nowhere near the record-breaking rises we see now," Weinberger told the American Association of Medical Clinics Thursday.

Now, with national health insurance legislation on the horizon —although passage of a bill appears unlikely this year —continued price hikes threaten doctors, hospitals and others with new government controls, Weinberger said.

"The danger is that substantial increases in the cost of health care, such as those we are now experiencing, could lead to public demand to limit the independence traditionally accorded to providers of health care and to broaden the extent of federal intervention in the operation of America's health care system," he said.

Tough talk on health care inflation is not new for Weinberger. On May 3 he warned leaders of major health groups that they must control their costs or the government might be forced to do it for them.

He said such "skyrocketing inflation" threatens to hamstring health insurance programs for the aged and the poor, limit federal health services for veterans, military personnel, American Indians and others served by Public Health Service projects, and erode cancer, heart and other disease research.

"If the current trend continues even at a reduced rate, it may well add another billion dollars to our already swollen federal health budget," he said.

Market chain sued in class action case

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A supermarket chain was named in a class action suit filed Thursday in federal court by a black man charging discrimination in hiring and personnel policies.

Clifford A. Lawson, 47, claimed that of 1,400 persons employed by Hughes Markets Inc., in 1973, only 2 per cent were black.

He alleged that "word of mouth" recruitment was used when new employes were needed and that hiring blacks was discouraged.

Lawson, now working in the transportation industry, applied for a job with the chain in May 1973.

Test with wallets

Civilians not as honest as cops?

NEW YORK (UPI) — Who's more honest, the civilian or the cop?

According to a test involving susposedly lost wallets, the man in uniform is more trustworthy than the average man in the street.

The test showed that 44 per cent of civilians failed to turn in wallets they found in the street. In addition, one of the wallets turned in was missing the money it once contained.

In contrast, in a similar integrity test involving randomly selected police officers, 29 per cent of the men in blue failed to return the "lost" wallets to their owners. And all of the wallets returned by officers contained the money they originally had.

Patrolmen's Benevolent Association president Ken McFeeley said at a news conference that the test of civilian honesty was conducted for one week last month by an independent consulting group.

Fifty wallets, each containing identification and $9 in cash, were dropped at 10 locations around the city. Cameras trained on the sites recorded the public response, and the film that resulted was shown to newsmen Thursday.

McFeeley said only eight wallets were returned —and the cash had been removed from one of them.

In a police department test during the last three months of 1973, 51 wallets were handed over to officers by civilians who said they had found them. A police department spokesman said 15 wallets —or 29 per cent —were not turned in.

McFeeley said the PBA will conduct more integrity tests and to "encourage better public performance" it will publish in advertisement the names of those who find wallets but do not turn them in.

Asked how the investigators will learn the names of those failing to turn in the wallets, a union spokesman said: "We'll follow them."

"It is our hope that as the public becomes accustomed to these tests, the scores will improve until the standards of the community more closley match those of police officers," McFeeley said.

Smile!

Cheerfulness may thwart would-be holdup artists

LA JOLLA, Calif. (UPI) — If a clerk smiles at a would-be robber when he walks in a store, will he leave and go stick-up another place of business where the clerks don't smile?

An ex-convict says it's quite possible. He and a dozen other researchers here plan to spend $153,000 during the next 14 months to find out.

The federal government offered the contract to the Western Behavioral Sciences Institute after Ray Johnson came up with the idea for the study.

"A lot of people getting ready to commit armed robbery look for some kind of sign not to do it," said Johnson, 48, a veteran of 25 years behind bars. "Most people pulling such holdups are probably as frightened as the victim when they get the gun out."

Take that smile, for instance.

Johnson said it "spooked" him once when he walked into a store and the clerk flashed a big smile and said "hello."

Johnson said he backed out because he had experienced some personal contact with the clerk.

So, during the pilot study involving 60 stores, clerks will be encouraged to smile at their customers to deter the few who might change their minds because of the contact.

Another part of the project will be conceiving ways to make people loiter in stores. Robbers don't like to contend with lots of people, Johnson said.

Another project researcher, Peter Shoup, said sponsoring a Little League baseball team might help a store's image and could possibly avoid a holdup.

Statistics developed in Oakland showed most robbers stuck up stores within a mile or so of their homes, he said.

Another idea is adding the chatter of a police radio to a store's atmosphere in an effort to unnerve robbers. Taking the clutter out of windows might help, too, so a robber doesn't have something to hide him from street view.

Johnson and another former robber plan to hold seminars with store clerks and managers to discuss their ideas. If they work, the program will be expanded for national use.

For San Diego store owners, the help can't come too soon. Armed robberies increased by 37 per cent here during the first three months of the year.

Johnson said he sees three reasons for the increase. First, more guns are in circulation because more are being bought —then taken in home burglaries.

Additionally, robbers know when they hold up a retail establishment they have a good chance of leaving with something. Cracking a safe, for instance, could prove fruitless.

But perhaps the most troubling reason for the increase is inflation. As Johnson explained it, what you rob these days doesn't go as far as it used to.

Fire department closes downtown law school

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — The downtown law school of United States International University was closed by fire officials recently because of several fire code violations.

The school then rented space for the 450 students involved at the downtown community concourse until repairs could be completed.

Dr. Jack Edling, USIU vice president, said the school has been working as quickly as possible to complete the $90,000 changes required. He estimated they would be finished within a month.

The law school is located on three floors in an old Masonic Temple, which was converted last year from the USIU School of Performing Arts.

A fire department spokesman said the hazards included wiring in need of repair, lack of or inadequate exit signs, improper fire exits, inadequate latches, missing doors and fire walls and a poor alarm system.

The largest expense involves enclosing the school's present staircase and building another fire exit for the front of the building.

"They've had a year to move toward compliance,' fire chief Leonard Bell said. "We sought to help as much as we could and we gave them a reasonable amount of time, but we've gone as far as we could go."

Dr. Robert K. Castetter, dean of the law school, said the school has received recognition from 12 state Supreme Courts for its law reviews and has had several winning teams in international and United States law competition.

Deposit boxes

NEW YORK (UPI) — The American Bankers Association says the first safe deposit box as it is known today appeared in 1865. At that time, the Safe Deposit Co. of New York offered its customers the latest in security, and guaranteed individual privacy and exclusive control of his own property.

Behind schedule, his ashes are scattered on railroad tracks

SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI) — Buck Weaver was a small man, short and bald and 81 years of age when cancer took what was left of his life on July 7.

At his own explicit, handwritten instructions, his body was taken from the nursing home where he had lived for 18 months and was cremated. There was no funeral service and his death notice took up only three lines of agate type in the local newspapers.

If he had any survivors, no one knew about them. His wife was killed by a speeding automobile 25 years ago.

About four years ago, Buck fell and broke his hip and never walked again. That was the beginning of the end for the old man because it left him bedridden, unable to go fishing or walk down by the railroad tracks and watch the trains go by.

Weaver and railroading got together the day he was born and christened Edward Ivan Weaver in the Green River Valley town of Slaughter on Jan. 27, 1893. That same year they changed the name of the village to Auburn. But Buck forever called the place Slaughter because it was named for an Army lieutenant who died there defending a fort from Indians long before the railroad came through.

After his wife died, Buck moved to Seattle and took up residence in an apartment where he met his girl friend, Violet. Here friends called Violet "the Florence Nightengale of First Hill" because she was always doing things for people, especially the elderly.

One of the last things she did for Buck was see that he was properly cremated. She also promised that she would scatter his ashes on the railroad tracks.

That was what Violet, 55, was trying to do Sunday, Aug. 25. After keeping the ashes for almost a month, she took them to the Burlington Northern freight yard in a six-by-eightinch wooden box that had Weaver's name enscribed on it.

But Violet couldn't get the box open so she just left it on the tracks, hoping it would get smashed and the ashes scattered by passing train. But a yardmaster making his rounds found and notified police. The box was turned over to the medical examiner who placed the remains back in the office of the mortician.

The story appeared in a local newspaper and an unidentified railroader who read it Wednesday took the box aboard a switch engine heading south down the line.

As the locomotive passed through "Slaughter," the railroad man opened the box and scattered the ashes.

Edward Ivan Weaver was home again.

Crime rate rising at slower pace

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The number of major crimes reported in California is still increasing but at a slower rate than previous years, Attorney General Evelle J. Younger says.

Younger said the number of the major crimes — which included willful homicide, forcible rape, robbery, aggravated assault, burglary, grand theft and auto theft — totaled 740,157, up 2.2 per cent from 1972.

But he pointed out the seven major offenses rose, on the average, 9.7 per cent per year from 1968 through 1971 in California.

"Although crimes continue to rise," he said, "this rate of increase has decidedly slowed down as is evidenced by a moderate 1.3 per cent gain in 1972 and a 2.2 per cent advance in 1973.

"It is apparent that 1972 was the turning point for a slower rate of growth for crimes in California," Younger said in a report entitled "Crime and Delinquency in California— 1973."

The Republican attorney general, who is seeking reelection this year, also said the statewide crime rate of 3,569 per 100,000 population last year was only 1 per cent higher than 1972.

Developed from reports submitted by police, sheriff's and highway patrol departments in California, the figures showed that nearly 46 per cent of all 1973 arrests were related to alcohol or drugs.

Younger said the data indicated that crimes against property such as burglary and grand theft continued to account for about 85 per cent of all crimes reported. Such crimes were up 1.7 per cent in 1972 as compared to a 5.3 per cent jump in crimes of violence.

$10,000 reward in twin slaying

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — 'Anonymous friends" of USC Wednesday offered a $10,000 reward to the first person supplying information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person who killed a university couple two days ago.

Police said they were 'following leads," but had nothing new to report in their investigation of the double murder of John T. Davis Jr., 22, Los Angeles, and his girlfriend, Donna L. Walker, 19 Westwood, who were shot to death as they strolled along the university's fraternity and sorority row.

Rockefeller could keep control of holdings?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The chairman of the Senate Rules Committee has suggested that Nelson A. Rockefeller could become vice president without giving up control of his vast holdings. But he must make full public disclosure of his wealth.

Sen. Howard W. Cannon, D-Nev., said Wednesday that Rockefeller would not be "in a policy-making position" and previous vice presidents had not been required to sell their holdings.

"Of course with a man like this we have a special case, and it's up to the committee to decide," he said.

The Senate Rules and House Judiciary Committees will handle the former New York governor's confirmation. Investigations have already begun.

Cannon said his panel would meet next week to decide on procedural matters and perhaps the question of Rockefeller's holdings.

"Perhaps," Cannon said, "if he made it all public" there would be no need for Rockefeller to put his wealth in a blind trust or sell some of it.

Other senators have said if Rockefeller sold his securities —which include 425,000 shares of Exxon —it might have an adverse effect on the stock market.

Cannon said he expected Congress would complete action on Rockefeller before it adjourns in mid-October. "I cannot conceive of us recessing and leaving this up in mid-air."

Cannon refused to disclose Rockefeller's net worth, but said: "I always thought he was a wealthy man and now I know he is a wealthy man."

In New York City, Rockefeller's news secretary, Hugh Morrow, estimated that 400 FBI agents were investigating both in the U.S. and Latin America, where Rockefeller has extensive holdings.

Morrow said that seven agents had been to Rockefeller's New York office for a week looking through records.

He said he had been advised that 10 to 15 investigators from the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation would begin going over the financial records Thursday.

"We also have three or four Government Accounting Office people here working on the governor's campaign records," Morrow said. "The records are in excellent condition, and they're being given access to everything they want."

Morrow said Rockefeller has turned over "voluminous" records, including seven years of local, state and federal income tax returns, gift tax returns, foreign taxes —particularly from Venezuela —a net worth statement and the securities left in two trusts by his father, John D. Rockefeller Jr.

The financial records will be reviewed by the members of the two committees, but will not be made public, Cannon said.

L.A. smog measuring standard hit

RIVERSIDE (UPI) — Scientists at the UC Riverside Statewide Air Pollution Research center agreed Wednesday with state and federal air quality agencies that the smog measuring standard used by Los Angeles County is inaccurate.

The center's report indicated that because the Los Angeles Air Pollution Control District's smog measuring standard is incorrect, there has been about 30 per cent more oxidant, the main ingredient of smog, in the county than reported.

This would mean that fewer health advisories were issued in the county because of the lower oxidant readings.

The Los Angeles APDC maintains that its method is more accurate and a district spokesman said Wednesday the agency would await the findings of a committee set up by the Air Resources Board that is studying the problem.

Dr. James N. Pitts Jr., director of the center, said, "We didn't intend to get our heads in a buzzsaw between two agencies. We did (the tests) because we needed the data ourselves."

Pitts said the center assembled a team of scientists and used the most sophisticated air pollution testing equipment in the country in coming up with oxidant levels similar to those of the ARB and the Environmental Protection Agency.

"Thus, the procedures used by the ARB and the EPA to monitor atmospheric oxidant does, within experimental error (about 5 per cent), accurately reflect the ozone content of ambient air," Pitts said.

The Los Angeles agency scored a temporary victory last month when the ARB ordered the outlying counties to raise their warning levels to conform with those in Los Angeles County.

This was to be on an interim basis until ARB's committee concluded its study.

Husband of new GOP chief proud

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI) — The husband of Mary Louise Smith, soon to become the first woman chairman of the Republican National Committee, has given some advice to young married couples planning separate professional careers.

Dr. Elmer Smith, director of medical services with the Iowa Department of Social Services, said Wednesday separate careers usually make for a better marriage. He points to his 40-year marriage as an excellent example.

"I think, of course, it depends on the individuals concerned," Smith said, "but it usually makes for a better marriage. I'm not jealous, just very proud of my wife's accomplishments."

Mrs. Smith, 60, was named by President Ford Wednesday to succeed George Bush as Republican National Committee chairman. Bush was nominated as envoy to China.

"I've been lucky because we've had such a great marriage," he said. "I'd tell all that trying to achieve one's own is a very good thing. You are not holding back that way."

Smith and his wife have three children, Robert, a Des Moines doctor; Ames, who lives in Iowa City; and Margaret, who is married and lives in San Francisco.

Dr. Smith indicated he doesn't plan to move from his residence in Des Moines or give up a "very good, lucrative" job with the state. He said his wife has lived in a Washington apartment since her appointment as GOP co-chairman six months ago.

"We do a lot of commuting back and forth to see one another, and I imagine that we will have to commute even more now," he said.

But Smith was nothing but smiles over his wife's appointment to the top GOP post and went as far as to say that she would make an excellent appointee as the first woman cabinet officer.

Claremont High students Peggy Losh, Susan Johnson, and Arthur Cain, from left, give student lockers a washing in preparation for opening of school next Tuesday. New dean of activities Jeff Daley held a conference Tuesday with 131 student council members and other school leaders, and the students proposed that a positive image at Claremont High could be created if the students themselves cleaned up the campus. The result was a one-day cleanup endeavor Thursday which left things spotless.

No refund comes with returned propane gas

Cal Gas-El Monte picked up a propane tank from my home at my request on Feb. 23, 1973.

I got a receipt from the man who made the pickup only after I refused to let the tank go without receiving one.

My reasoning was that if I paid for the gas in it I should be paid for the gas remaining since the people at Cal Gas would completely fill it and sell it to the next customer. They would be paid twice for the gas I didn't use.

I was assured that I would receive a refund in a month or six weeks.

In spite of writing several times, I have not so much as received a note from Cal-Gas. —Mrs. D. B., Mt. Baldy.

We don't know who promised you a refund. E. J. Nicklaus, general manager of Cal Gas-El Monte, said no refund is made when a tank still containing gas is picked up at the customer's request.

He said you were notified of that policy when the tank was installed.

Nicklaus denies that Cal Gas had heard from you about the refund you want. He said that if he had received a letter from you he would have responded.

Estimating that the gas in your tank was worth a little more than $6, he said it would not be resold.

The 34 gallons became part of 1,700 gallons donated to the El Monte Fire Department for a demonstration and fire-fighting practice.

That's not just a lot of hot air. We confirmed the donation with the fire department.

We are having a hopeless time trying to make somebody at World Book Encyclopedia hear us.

The poor souls claim we owe them $7.30 for their 1974 year book. Nonsense!

We paid for the yearbook with a money order and know that World Book Encyclopedia received it because we put a tracer on it.

My wife wrote to the company. When we continued to receive bills, I wrote and enclosed copies of the money order and the reply to the tracer.

I was mad when I wrote. I told the company to send me no more yearbooks.

If you can get through to the company, please reaffirm my cancellation.—B. B., Pomona.

After we wrote to the company, you received a frank admission that the staff of World Book Encyclopedia didn't know why the remittance was not previously identified.

World Book apologized and asked for another opportunity to serve you.

You phoned your thanks to Action Line.

Is it legal or normal procedure for the Veterans Administration to deduct from a widow's pension because of an increase in Social Security?

After my husband passed away in October 1972, I was told I was to receive $56.40 per month.

I did receive that amount from from January 1973 until April 1 of this year. Since then I have been sent only $25.84 each month.

I don't understand why they should do that. —L. B., Pomona.

You told us that you wrote to the VA after receiving notification of the change in the pension, saying the change would be a hardship because you needed glasses and money for home repairs and yard work.

You also told us that you have emphysema, heart trouble and anemia.

A VA representative explained to us that a widow's pension fluctuates because there are maximum allowable incomes.

Confirming that you did write in April, he said you gave no specifics about medical expenses although you were sent a form to fill out.

If your medical expenses exceeded five per cent of your gross income in 1973, you are advised to fill out the form for possible retroactive increase.

Flouridation given preliminary okay

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Flouridation of the municipal water supply was given preliminary approval Wednesday by the City Council.

10 cities share $304,000 in taxes collected by state

State Controller Houston I. Flournoy reported the distribution of more than $304,000 to 10 valley cities from the August apportionments of highway users, cigarette taxes and state-collected in-lieu motor vehicle license fees.

The three sources meant a combined total of $5,301,096 for Los Angeles County government and $721,076 for San Bernardino County government.

From the apportionment of users taxes, $15,991,843 went directly to the counties, $12,053,163 to cities, $35,762,808 for expenditures on state highways and $30,000 to the Bicycle Lane Account.

The total distribution was $1,974,755 less than that for the same month last year.

Cities locally received the following amounts:

Pomona, $66,008; Ontario, $43,904; Upland, $25,534; Claremont, $19,095; Chino, $16,217; Montclair, $15,421; San Dimas, $13,257; La Verne, $11,981; Walnut, $5,055; and Industry, $941.

A total of $5,102,125 was the cities' and counties' share of license fees and other revenues deposited in the Motor Vehicle License Fee Account during July.

The state excise tax at the rate of $2 per $100 of market value takes the place of local property tax on motor vehicles.

The valley distribution was:

Pomona, $13,789; Ontario, $10,352; Upland, $5,981; Claremont, $3,929; Chino, $3,764; Montclair, $3,574; San Dimas, $2,702; La Verne, $2,434; Walnut, $978; and Industry, $114.

From the cigarette tax fund, the 58 counties shared $773,255 and $3,197,524 was divided among the cities.

This distribution represents 30 per cent of the revenue deposited in the fund during the month of July less the state's administrative costs of $25,296.

Shares in the valley were:

Pomona, $14,602; Ontario, $8,929; Industry, $5,824; Montclair, $5,079; Upland, $4,874; Chino, $2,928; Claremont, $2,769; San Dimas, $1,894; La Verne, $1,660; and Walnut, $610.

Oil legislation fuel for the fire?

The energy crisis, brought to a head by the Arab oil embargo just a few months ago, seems to have been relegated to the status of an unpleasant but fading memory in the public mind.

Congress, too, appears to have an equally short memory if one is to judge by its contributions to "Project Independence" — the great government-inspired effort aimed at making the United States self-sufficient in energy by 1980.

So far, the nation's legislators have mandated national year-round Daylight Saving Time, a measure of dubious merit in conserving energy which they are considering modifying.

A bill authorizing the Alaskan pipeline was passed (after a five-year delay) and should be bringing some significant, though hardly adequate, amounts of oil to the U.S. market by late 1977 at the earliest.

The 55-mile-per-hour limit has helped the country cut gasoline consumption but there is evidence that it is being increasingly ignored by motorists and enforced decreasingly by authorities.

There is no lack of energy, however, when it comes to legislation aimed at reforming the oil industry. Bills abound in Congress, ranging from doing away with the depletion allowance to eliminating the foreign tax credit for U.S. companies to setting up a federal oil and gas corporation in direct competition with oil companies here.

The latter idea, favored by Sen. Adlai Stevenson III, (D-Ill), would put the government in the oil and gas business ostensibly to increase competition by acting as a yardstick for the industry on such things as prices. Something like a TVA for petroleum.

The petroleum industry views this possibility with a great deal of alarm and as industries usually do in such cases, is attempting to show that what is bad for it is bad for America.

A federal oil and gas corporation is only the tip of the iceberg of government interference with private industry, oil spokesmen warn. Other industries may be next — auto, steel, drug, banking and insurance, for examples.

If nothing else, just the threat of government competition seems to have served the useful purpose of keeping the oil industry on its toes. The important thing to note, however, is that the Stevenson proposal, like much of the other legislation aimed at the oil industry, whatever its merits, literally does nothing to add a drop of oil to the nation's reserves.

No matter how one feels about the petroleum industry, the oil companies constitute about the only sector working positively to solve the nation's energy problems, particularly with their massive commitments of capital for increased exploration and development.

It is estimated that this year the U.S. petroleum industry will reinvest a record $18.7 billion, an increase of 51 per cent over last year's $12.4 billion.

Of that $18.7 billion, $10 billion will be put back into the ground in the effort to find and develop not only oil and gas but other sources of energy, such as shale oil and coal.

In a recent talk, Charles J. DiBona, executive vice president of the American Petroleum Institute, recommended a simple test for proposed legislation affecting oil industry operations. Constructive proposals, he said, should result in a "yes" answer to either or both of the following questions:

First, will the proposal encourage greater efficiency in the use of energy? Second, will the proposal result in increased energy supply?

It's a simple but useful yardstick that government as well as the oil industry must use if "Project Independence" is to be realized.

Applause for police

At times the dry and meticulous detective work of a modern police force can be more dramatic in its way than the chases and gunfire of a typical cops and robbers series on television. So it is with the manner in which Los Angeles police, with the aid of federal agents, put their finger on a prime suspect in their airport bombing case.

Only a few vague clues had suggested some characteristics of the person who planted a bomb at the Los Angeles International airport on Aug. 6. To match those characteristics with a name in massive files of criminal records was looking for a needle in a haystack. It was done with remarkable speed, and shows we are not as helpless as we might have thought when a lone bomber tries to terrorize a city.

Thought for today

Employer support of the military

After quite an extensive and rewarding career in the automotive field, for the past several years I have found myself involved in an activity which has also been very rewarding and tremendously satisfying in terms of direct relationship to some very outstanding citizens throughout the country.

In June 1972, following my retirement as Board Chairman of General Motors, I accepted the chairmanship of the National Committee for Employer Support of the Guard and Reserve. Having recognized the essentiality of trained and ready citizen-military forces prepared to augment our active military as an integral part of this nation's defense team, I was willing to devote part of my time toward attempting to convince American employers of this need. It has been a most gratifying experience. American employers have responded as I knew they would.

Businessmen and women recognize the value of the Guard and Reserve furnishing 30 percent of our military personnel structure at a cost of less than 5 percent of the budget. They also recognize the fact that Guard and Reserve training broadens an individual, adds to that person's capability, supplies additional income and a retirement program which adds to employee stability and assures the necessary protection should the need arise.

So far, more than 250 thousand employers have formally expressed their commitment by signing Statements of Support for the Guard and Reserve which facilitate the participation of eligible employees in Guard and Reserve programs without impediment or penalty. These signed Statements, which covers some 46 million employees, or above 56 percent of the total work force, assure the employee that he or she may serve in the Guard or Reserved without loss of job security or earned vacation time.

We cannot rest on our prior successes. There is still 44 percent of the employees across our country who are not yet covered by Statements of Support, and it is their employers whom we are now seeking. We urge and we hope all American employers will sign one of our Statements of Support for the Guard and Reserve regardless of the size of their organization and whether or not they currently employ a member of the Guard and Reserve.

To maintain the kind of Guard and Reserve our nation needs, employer support is essential. Your Statement of Support can be secured by writing to EMPLOYER SUPPORT, Arlington, Virginia 22202. Our thanks for your consideration. —J. M. Roche, National Chairman.

McGovern writes to Pres. Ford

WASHINGTON — All but forgotten in the Watergate aftermath has been its chief victim, Sen. George McGovern, who was badly defeated after the dirtiest presidential campaign in American history.

Yet the South Dakota senator, betraying no bitterness, has written a stirring, private letter to the man who has now wound up in the White House in his place, without ever running for President.

The letter, intended for President Ford's eyes only, thanks him for his "constructive leadership" at this critical hour and declares eloquently: "No one can now fail to see what is right with America, even as we strive to repair what is wrong."

Although McGovern was the Democratic presidential candidate in 1972 and will oppose Ford's election in 1976, he wrote the new President on August 30 to wish him well.

"No one who loves America has taken satisfaction from the crisis that put you in the nation's hardest job . . ." the letter allows. "But we can draw satisfaction from the underlying strength of our constitutional structure and the rule of law. For we have demonstrated that we take those principles seriously and that they can be made to work.

"For despite the serious challenges we have to face, despite the honest differences we are bound to have, we have taken the first and greatest step toward recovery. Our confidence is returning."

Citing what is right with America, McGovern tells Ford warmly: "One thing that is right is your approach to the presidency. Above all else the country needed healing. You have understood that need and met it.

"The spirit of excessive partisanship is gone from the White House. Instead you have summoned a spirit of cooperation from Democrats and Republicans alike. Instead of 'enemies lists,' there is a list of domestic and foreign priorities we share together.

"And with the sense of common purpose you have inspired, we face them with renewed strength and resolution — as one united people once again. We can hammer out the answers on the basis of mutual respect, and with a common vision of America as a great and decent land."

McGovern goes on to praise his political adversary. "You have the opportunity and the capacity to be a great President," writes the senator. "You bring to the White House the same qualities of fundamental honesty and fairness those of us who served with you saw in Gerry Ford, our colleague in the House.

"As President Ford, you have called upon civility among politicians. That alone would be an historic achievement. Knowing you as I have, I see every chance for equal achievements in meeting the challenge of inflation and other challenges still unforeseen.

"For my part, you can be assured that I will give all the help I can to a President doing all he can to find the best course for the country."

ILLEGAL LETTER: Feisty, fiery Rep. Charles Sandman, R-N.J., who kept the House impeachment hearing in turmoil with his outspoken defense of ex-President Nixon, apparently hasn't learned his Watergate lesson.

It is against the law for congressmen to use federal office space to solicit or receive "any contribution of money or other thing of value for any political purpose."

Yet Sandman utilized federal premises to print a two-page letter begging friends "to send $100, $75, $50, $25, $10, $5 or whatever you can afford" for his re-election campaign.

A spokesman for Sandman conceded that the letter was printed in the congressional storage room assigned to the congressman. The spokesman stressed that the printing press belonged to Sandman personally and that the paper was purchased with campaign funds.

However, the printing was done on federal property and the paper was purchased at reduced rates through the federally run House stationery store.

HEADLINES AND FOOTNOTES: Atty. Gen. William Saxbe has called for a crackdown on hardened criminals who have learned how to cope with the courts and prisons to delay trials and land quick paroles. This gives them a maximum time on the streets where they terrorize law-abiding Americans. Saxbe wants the courts and parole boards to give first priority to keeping THE "repeaters" off the streets . . . Ironically, the Republicans gerrymandered out of his seat Rep. James Scheuer, D-N.Y., the man whose legislation established an institute which helped develop many of the weapons to be used in Saxbe's crackdown on crime. These include cheap burglar alarms for mom-and-pop stores, tiny radio warning sets for bus drivers and nonlethal-rubber bullets and darts that police can use to stop criminals without killing them.

Compounding our energy problems

WASHINGTON — Overnight it seems the federal bureaucracy forgot the lessons of the wheat deal with Russia — an arrangement through which we subsidized exports, created costly scarcities at home and cheated both farmer and consumer.

A major part of the problem, it was later discovered, was that one section of the government did not know what other sections were doing. Crucial information never reached the people who needed it to make appropriate decisions.

This reporter has now learned that at the height of the gas shortage when it was apparent that there would have to be unprecedented power conservation and development efforts, when officials in concerned agencies were fighting to get all available materials to the energy industry, others, often within the same agencies, were approving major exports of these same scarce materials with direct and indirect subsidies to be paid by the American taxpayer.

Item: Already-approved nuclear power plants were behind schedule because of materials shortages — notably heavy reinforcing bars and specialized pumps and valves.

The domestic section of the Atomic Energy Commission, therefore, was working overtime to scrape up that equipment and get it to the plant builders.

At the same point in time, the Export-Import Bank and the foreign section of the AEC were approving subsidies to speed the export of identical equipment, adding to the delay in plant building and slowing development of new electric power supplies here.

Item: While one government office charged with boosting U.S. oil production was attempting to ferret out scarce oilwell casing, off-shore drilling rigs and other essential equipment at skyrocketing prices, the Export-Import Bank was pushing for low-cost loans to subsidize exports. And succeeding all too frequently, according to men responsible for handling the energy crisis equipment shortage.

Item: The same cross-purpose problems have arisen in the subsidize-export vs save-for-domestic-use fights over geothermal, coal mining and refinery equipment, large centrifugal pumps of all sizes and supplies for building deep-water ports.

Even when there has been coordination, the loopholes have at times been ridiculous past understanding. For example, if heavy trucks were to be exported for some other purpose, say for use in iron or mining, operations, no approval was needed. But the export of these heavy trucks, in short supply, handicaps the domestic energy-development program to precisely the same degree in either case.

The federal bureaucracy has not been alone in these shenanigans. The domestic and foreign departments of the dominant companies building equipment for the energy industry have been working against each other, neither knowing or seemingly caring what their company policy was or should be.

J. K. (DOC) PEIRSOL

Just in jest

According to latest count there are only about 3 million farmers in the United States whose duty it is to feed the rest of us—3 million active military personnel whose duty it is to protect us—and maybe 3 million millionaires, whose assets being invested in tax-free securities, are consequently able to take care of themselves. So the way I figure it, that leaves only about 3 million hard working, long suffering, middle class taxpayers to support the rest of the howling mob that is either employed by the government, drawing down unemployment or living on welfare relief.

* * *

These are days when everybody and his brother is trying to find new ways to damn our so-called political criminals.—But whey bother when someone has already said it so much better? It was Hilaire Belloc, way back in an almost forgotten era, who put it this way in his "Epitaph on the Politician Himself."

"Here richly, with ridiculous display,
The Politician's corpse was laid away.
While all of his acquaintance sneered and slanged,
I wept, for I had longed to see him hanged."

TOM TIEDE

Who's to protect us from our protectors?

WASHINGTON — Though it has not been entirely confirmed, there is general agreement now that civilian officers kept very tight control over military commanders during the tense period of Richard Nixon's resignation. Defense chief James Schlesinger is said to have worried prudently about "a military intervention into the constitutional process." The latter is a polite phrase for a harsh matter: military coup.

Skeptics deny the possibility only at the nation's peril. Though the American military has been among history's more obedient armed forces, and though it is at least the most puissant war machine ever generaled by businessmen and academics, it is a group not entirely peopled by angels. Institutionally the services subscribe to democracy; but individually, at least on occasion, it is a different matter.

I have in mind an example of a Marine lieutenant, the illustrative suggestion of a California lawyer named Doug Sorenson. Last summer this lieutenant, who shall remain nameless here, brought court martial charges against an enlisted man whom Sorenson was hired to defend. The facts of the case are of no consequence now, nor is the guilt or innocence of the enlisted gyrene. What is important, and shocking, is Sorenson's recollection of the attitudes and opinions of this service officer which, though certainly atypical, should be read with care by confident citizens who worry not at all about the U.S. military.

During the course of an interview between attorney Sorenson and the complainant lieutenant, the subject matter strayed from legalities and into philosophies. In this respect the officer admitted an intellectual health that can only be described as grim. When asked about his observations on justice, for instance, the lieutenant replied: "I don't think the system of justice works. I believe that might makes right. If all there is is you and me and a hamburger, if you whip me then you have the right to the hamburger. I don't believe in sharing just because we're both human beings and we're both starving."

Beyond this, the lieutenant admitted no belief in compassion either. Not even for his fellows in the service. During one portion of the interview he stumbled into the subject of the men of the USS Pueblo, who in 1971 surrendered and were taken prisoners by the North Koreans. The lieutenant said he was angry that these men, who survived beatings and torture, were allowed to return to the United States alive: "I thought they were gonnna hang beaucoup soon as they (returned). Yes, sir. They (the U.S. military) should have shot them in front of the masses, thousands."

Finally, and most gruesome of all, the Marine officer gave his comments on his profession. A good soldier, he said, is a lot like a good Nazi: "There is no doubt that Adolf Eichmann was a very poor person. He may have been sick, I don't know. But he killed a lot of people. But there is also no doubt that he was an outstanding soldier. He was a terrific soldier. By God, he got the order and he carried it out."

As mentioned before, it must be hoped that the attitudes of this particular military man (who, by the way, is still in uniform) are isolated. But experience indicates that they are not as rare as they should be in the services. Men with similar views have worn stars and commanded legions. Though all in the service swear or affirm allegiance to the Constitution, military annals are crammed with an arresting assortment of examples of men putting patriotism above democracy. There is a retired general in Texas, for one, who believes military rule in America is inevitable; as he puts it, "If we ran everything like a division, we wouldn't have half the problems."

This is not to say the hob-nail minds seriously threaten the military. Indeed the dimwits now as always are a very small minority. Just the same, there may be growing cause for concern. The military no longer draws its majority from the ranks of suspicious civilians — it is now a volunteer and even mercenary force. No one should lose any sleep over this; but during troubled times, or in fact at all times, it may be advisable for the civilian community to slumber with one of its eyes open.

The administrator of the new Law and Justice Agency is Bernard Borris, former judicial district coordinator and administrative analyst. His starting salary will be about $31,000 a year.

He will oversee the functions of the following departments and offices: the superior courts, the municipal courts, the judicial courts, sheriff, marshall, constables, district attorney, public defender, probation, county clerk, public administrator, coroner public guardian and criminal justice planning manager.

In proposing the agency to the board, County Administrative Officer Robert A. Covington said, "In forming the Law and Justice Agency, the basic mission, identity and statutory powers and responsibilities of each department or office would be retained.

"However, after appropriate review and study it may be possible to combine certain support services common to several departments. This would increase the efficiency and service and reduce costs."

Board Chairman Nancy Smith emphasized that increaseed efficiency and decreased costs were among the chief reasons for the creation of the agency.

She noted that several years ago a similar agency was formed, the Public Works Agency, and since its formation has saved the taxpayers almost $500,000.

Supervisor Robert O. Townsend of Chino noted that the creation of the agency was a timely action in light of information included in a recent report on comprehensive criminal justice plan which has been submitted to the Board.

"Input into that report from the district attorney, the public defender, and the superior and municipal courts indicates that the over-all co-ordination that this agency will provide is a vital necessity." Townsend said.

In his report to the board Covington said the agency should be organized with an immediate emphasis on establishing both short-range and long-range goals including the following:

1. The review and revision of existing procedures of managing the administrative activities of the law and justice units. The purpose would be to streamline the activities to provide for improved management.

2. The development and maintenance of comprehensive information and reporting systems within the agency for use by all levels of county management.

3. The establishment of procedural mechanisms to assist in consolidating operational goals and objectives of agency units to provide for a coordinated approach to the law and justice functions.

Ancient skull an old fossil

By JOSEPH FIRMAN

Because of an unusual number of problems this summer—out-of-state visitors, crabgrass, the Dodgers — I only recently got around to my May issue of Science Magazine, but it was well worth the wait. What did I find but an article snappily entitled "New Evidence of the Antiquity of Man in North America Deduced from Aspartic Acid Racemization." Grabs you, doesn't it?"

It seems that Jeffrey L. Bada, a scientist at the Scripps Institution of Oceanography at La Jolla, has developed a "fossil-dating tool" called (by him) racemization and is busily double-dating ancient skulls and bones found along the California coast. His dates came up much older than the ones ascribed to the relics. An ancient Indian skull found in 1929 on a sea cliff between Del Mar and Silano Beach, originally believed to be several thousand years old, was found by Bada to be 48,000 years old, give or take an eon.

If the data hold up under scientific scrutiny, it will mean that man came to North America thousands of years earlier than has been believed by archeologists and anthroplogists. The skull has a very small brain case, which is probably why the Indian came to Southern California.

Scientists have long believed that modern man, if that's what you call him, first entered the Western Hemisphere from Asia 20,000 to 25,000 years ago during the last great Ice Age, when there was a "land bridge" across the Bering Sea. Typical sneaky Russian trick.

The early arrivals trudged down the coast of Alaska, waterskied across Puget Sound and made their way on down to California, leading to pizza parlors and John Wayne movies. But Bada now claims that the first tribes (can Indians be pioneers?) came here possible as much as 100,000 years ago. The oldest surfers in history.

The scientists also went to work on a skull known as the Los Angeles Man because it was found near the intersection of La Tijera and La Cienega boulevards by a crew of the Works Progress Administration (WPA), which is pretty ancient history, too. There was no indication of how the Los Angeles Man met his death, but he was probably hit crossing against the lights, or possibly got mugged in the park. Bada puts his age at 26,000 years, a regular senior citizen.

While all the scientific evidence is not yet in, the new dates pose all sorts of intriguing questions. Was Southern California the true "cradle of humanity"? Was it on Cienega Boulveard that man first stood on this hind legs and looked around and said "Chee!"? Was Los Angeles County once the Garden of Eden?

Warning to industry

British firms to fall into hands of Arabs?

LONDON (UPI) — A Liberal party official warned the top 1,000 companies in British industry — including engineering, banking and insurance firmc — could fall into the hands of the Arab oil nations.

The warning was given at a news conference by Robert Robertson, vice chairman of the Scottish Liberal party and their industrial adviser.

He warned that in four to five years control of companies such as Vickers, GEC and Hawker Siddeley could be in Arab hands.

"It was the end product," he said," of the last Conservative government's policy of a speculative gamble of growth which fell catastrophically because of the miners' strike, the three-day working week and enormous increases in oil prices.

Robertson called for a government monitoring system to be set up before the coming general election along similar lines as the American anti-trust laws to prevent the Arab oil nations from gaining control of British companies.

Robertson said that when the Americans first came to Britain 25 years ago, there was a great outcry about them buying up British industry, but the Americans had three main advantages —they brought dollars which strengthened the pound, they brought management and they brought advanced technological know-how, from all of which the British economy had benefited.

He added "The Arab nations can offer none of these advantages, in fact the reverse."

"It would now be possible for the Arab nations to move their money from London causing a severe deterioration of the pound.

The doctor comments

While attacks annoy they aren't harmful

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I would like to know what the Wolff-Parkinson-White syndrome is? My heart specialist said that is what is wrong with me. I have been having a lot of heart palpitation.

I'm a 36-year-old woman, and last winter I was under a great strain. One night I felt extra tired, suddenly my whole body went numb. I felt like was dying. The only thing I could feel was my heart. It was beating so loud and fast I couldn't keep count. It slowed down and then before they got me to the hospital. I had seven more spells. There was no pain. My heart went back to normal six hours later.

Since then I have had about eight spells, not as bad though. The spells are quite frightening. Dr. Lamb, any advice or light you can lend on this situation would be appreciated. I stay afraid that my heart is going to stop when I have one of these spells.

DEAR READER — As bad as those attacks are, you can relax about them. They are unlikely to cause you any serious harm. A number of years ago my colleagues and I collected 100 cases of this problem from pilots in the U. S. Air Froce. We followed all of them for five years. They did as well as the pilots of equal age who had nothing wrong with them at all. Ours was a selected population since pilots were in better health than the general population, but it does indicate that it is frequently more of an annoyance than a danger to your health.

Those attacks of rapid heart action are part of the general picture although many people have the same defect you have and never have them at all. You may be surprised to know that you have had this same defect all of your life. You were born with it. The cause of the problem is literally a short circuit between the top and the bottom of your heart. There is an extra connection to pass the normal electrical impulse from the top to the bottom of your heart. Most of us have only one between the top and bottom of our heart. The extra connection can be detected with an electrocardiogram (E.C.G.).

That extra connection makes it possible for an electrical impulse to pass repeatedly at a rapid rate to the lower part of your heart. This causes the lower or pumping part of your heart to beat too fast and causes the attacks you described. Often the attacks will disappear on their own. If not, the doctor can usually terminate them with medicine.

If you have frequent attacks your doctor can prescribe medicines that usually prevent their recurrence. For mild attacks you might take a deep breath and hold it as long as you can without too much discomfort. Sometimes this breathing maneuver will stop the attack. But in any case, forget about the idea that your heart will stop during one of these attacks. The fact that you have already had several of these without any damage should give you some confidence. Trust your doctor and take the medicine he prescribes. If you still have attacks he can change the medication to suit your particular problem. You'll probably outlive him.

Send your questions to Dr. Lamb, in care of the Progress-Bulletin, P. O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. For a copy of Dr. Lamb's booklet on balanced diet, send 50 cents to the same address and ask for the "Balanced Diet" booklet.

Pan Am subsidy opposed by Senate leader

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield says he is opposed to a subsidy for Pan American World Airways and suggested a merger with Trans World Airlines for overseas routes.

Mansfield said Tuesday the Civil Aeronautics Board should explore the possibility of "amalgamation" of Pan Am and TWA before the CAB acts on Pan Am's petition for a $10 million a month federal subsidy.

The two are the nation's only commercial airlines with major schedules across the North Atlantic. Both face economic difficulties.

Mansfield said he generally favors "a curtailment of too many airlines and too many of the same routes."

Congress would not have to give its specific approval to a subsidy for Pan American, but it could refuse to appropriate the money if the CAB grants a subsidy.

Prohibition

Kansas was the first state to adopt constitutional prohibition of liquor. The amendment was added to the state constitution in 1880 and repealed in 1948.

FLOURNOY TO MEET WITH FORD

PALO ALTO (UPI) — Houston I. Flournoy, Republican candidate for governor, announced Thursday he will meet privately with President Ford at the White House Sept. 19 to recommend steps to fight inflation.

The two-term state controller also was expected to make a personal plea to the President that he and Vice President-designate Nelson A. Rockefeller campaign actively for him in California.

In a speech to the Palo Alto Kiwanis Club, the candidate said he would ask Ford to clamp a ceiling on federal spending and relax "tight money" policies that restrict home loans.

The visit with Ford will occur during a three-day trip to the East where Flournoy plans to solicit campaign donations from New York supporters of Rockefeller.

Flournoy has been trailing his Democratic opponent, Edmund Brown Jr., in public opinion polls while the popularity of the new president is high. In contract, Flournoy had not invited former President Nixon to campaign with him before the primary election because of Nixon's Watergate troubles.

Suggestions

Flournoy said among his suggestions to Ford would be a call for a $300 billion ceiling on federal spending in the 1975 fiscal year and an easing of federal home loan policy.

"I am convinced that our national monetary policy of tight money may be contributing to inflation rather than controlling it," he told members of the Kiwanis Club. "I would like to see money channeled away from the big borrowers and back into the home market, for example."

On Sept. 18, Flournoy plans to address a fund raising luncheon in New York. The following day he will meet with Federal Reserve Chairman Arthur Bruns and the California GOP Congressional delegation in addition to his visit with Ford.

A Flournoy aide said he expected the President would accept the invitation if some crisis did not arise, but it was probably Rockefeller would be tied lp with confirmation hearings in Washington.

Pounds Brown

Flournoy continued Thursday to pound at a promise by Brown to veto any general tax increase during his first year in office.

"Since there is a surplus of $350 million to $450 million in the state budget, this pledge would seem a little unnecessary, except that he is apparently planning to run through that surplus with his spending programs," Flournoy said.

Referring to the budget deficit Brown's father, former Gov. Edmund G. Brown, left for Gov. Ronald Reagan eight years ago, Flournoy remarked: "I just can't believe California voters will elect another Brown and put the state back into the red."

"I'm glad to see him expose himself to the public," Flournoy said of Brown's recent public appearances. "Already he is emulating his father and has foot and mouth disease."

It's season for Santa candidates

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI) — 'Tisn't the official season to be jolly, but it is the season to begin recruiting for Santa Claus candidates.

Western Temporary Services put out a call recently for men wanting to don the red St. Nick costume for the yuletide season.

"This is the time of the year that we go into high gear on the Santa Claus program," Sales Director Lynn Leach said.

She said her firm hired about 100 men last year for appearances in department stores, shopping centers, homes and parties.

What are the qualifications for the job?

Ms. Leach said: "A deep-sounding voice; a twinkle in [illegible]"

Historic Cyprus

By United Press International

Antony gave it to Cleopatra.

Alexander seized it as booty.

St. Paul evangelized it.

Richard the Lionheart grabbed it from the Byzantines.

The island of Cyprus can drop names like these in unending litany.

Although only the third largest island in the Mediterranean, it has witnessed more history and undergone more warfare than almost any similarly sized patch of land in the Western world.

Cyprus —about 3,600 square miles in area, 140 miles long and 60 miles at its greatest width —lies 40 miles south of Turkey and some 500 miles southeast of the Greek capital at Athens. The Turks put their imprint on it long before the Greeks, and ruled it throughout most of the past few centuries.

The island's history stretches back to the dim recesses of the New Stone Age. An important settlement near the south coast has been dated by carbon-14 tests at the mid-6th millennium B.C.

Anatolia is the Asiatic part of Turkey, and Anatolian-type pottery dating from the 23rd century B.C. has been found on Cyprus. This period was the Middle Bronze Age, which gave way to the Late Bronze Age, 1600 to 1050 B.C., during which Cyprus became a great mart of the east. The first Greek episode came in 1400 B.C. when Mycenaean traders appeared. Then another Greek tribe, the Achaeans, swarmed in to colonize the island and introduce the Hellenic culture and language.

The Achaeans established an autocratic type of kingship patterned after the Oriental style. The country traded, at first on a small scale, with Syria, Palestine, Egypt and Asia minor. After the 9th century B.C., this trade became brisker. Trade also flourished at this time with Greece, wiith the island of Rhodes serving as the chief middleman between Cyprus and the Greek mainland.

The Phoenicians started playing a role in Cyprus' development in the 8th century B.C.

The Cypriot kings kept their independence until 709 B.C., when the Assyrian King Sargon II forced them into submission. Assyrian monarchs held sway until about the year 670. Then Cyprus enjoyed nearly a 100 years of virtual freedom. Mining and shipbuilding reached a peak, palaces and monumental tombs built, and exquisite ornamented bowls and silver vases were produced. Greek epic poetry celebrated this gloriously rich century of Cypriot culture. A famous epic called "Cypria," attributed to the poet Stasinus, belongs to this period.

Egypt became the great power in the Near East after the decline of Assyria, and Egypt depended on Cyprus for badly needed minerals and shipbuilding materials. Pharoah Ahmose II conquered the island in 560, but he and his succeessors allowed the Cypriot kings and kingdoms to survive so long as they paid tribute.

Cyprus surrendered to King Cambyses shortly before the Persian monarch annexed Egypt to his empire. Under Cambyses and his successors Darius and Xerxes, the Cypriot kings still managed to flourish and even minted their own coins. Cyprus provxided 150 ships to Xerxes fleet in 480 and remained a part of the Persian Empire throughout the 5th century.

After Alexander the Great brought both Persia and Greece under his sway in the fourth century, all the Cypriot states submitted to him. Ptolemy I, king of Egypt, took over Cyprus in the wake of Alexander's death.

At about this time Jewish settlers first reached the island. Throughout the Ptolemaic period viceroys of the Egyptian royal family usually ruled Cyprus.

The Romans made huge unsecured loans to Ptolemy Auletes, and when he didn't pay up, they annexed the island in 58 B.C. Antony offered the island to Cleopatra as a present shortly before the battle of Actium in 31 B.C., when the Egyptian queen and her lover were vanquished by the future Emperor Augustus.

Under the Roman Empire, Cyprus took the form of a separate province ruled by proconsuls. The persecution of the Christians in Italy led many of them to flee to Cyprus. A number of Cypriot Jews, among them Barnabas, preached throughout the island. Barnabas also preached in Antioch and later revisited Cyprus with St. Paul. The Jews of Cyprus were later driven off the island by the Emperor Hadrian.

Cyprus was a subject state of the Eastern Empire after Rome was divided in 395 A.D. The island was ruled by the eastern emperors for more than seven centuries, and it was for the most part a peaceful period.

Then, in the 7th century A.D., the Muslims began a series of devastating assaults. An amir of Syria swept across the island with his troops and brought it under tribute during the years 647 to 649. Arabs struck again in 653 and set up a garrison which remained until 680. For the next 300 years Cyprus was a beanbag tossed back and forth between Islam and Constantinople, capital of the Eastern Empire. Each used the hapless isle as a base from which to attack the other. The Muslims were kept power of the Byzautine fleet, power of the Byzafzk fleet, but their hit and run raids were frequent and occasionally prolonged.

Finally, in 965, the Eastern Roman Emperor Nicephorus II Phocas mustered enough strength to put an end to the Muslim onslaughts. And so for the next two centuries Cyprus was safely nestled within the Byzantine domains. Now and then it was used as a springboard for revolt against the imperial regime. One power-hungry Byzantine governor, Isaac Comnenus, defied the efforts of two successive emperors to dislodge him, but in 1191 he unwisely antagonized the English crusaders led by Richard the Lionheart. The enraged monarch proceeded to conquer Cyprus and eventually presented it to Guy de Lusignan, the dispossessed king of Jerusalem.

The feudal kingdom set up by the new French-born sovereign lasted until the end of the Middle Ages. French language and culture dominated the court and the aristicracky, although the peasants retained their old ways. Trade was mostly with Italy and merchants from that country, especially Venetians and Genoans, played a more and more significant part in the island's life. So much so, that Cyprus became a part of the Venetian empire in the 15th century.

The Genoese had seized it first, but they were driven off in 1464 by Cypriot King James II, who had allied himself with a Muslim force from Egypt. Eight years later James wed a Venetian girl, and after his death the island was ruled from Venice in the queen's name. The Italian republic held on to the island until the Ottoman Turks strode in as conquerors in 1570.

Venice recognized the Ottoman Sultan as ruler of Cyprus in 1573. The early part of the long period of Turkish rule was reasonably benevolent, as the victors abolished serfdom and gave the Christians virtual autonomy. But then the Turks waxed indifferent and, eventually, tyrannical. Major mutinies against their rule took place in 1764, 1804 and 1821. Reform measures were haphayardly introduced in the 1830's and again in 1856, but they did not amount to much because the imperial treasury kept a stanglehold on the island's income.

Great Britain, in an agreement with the sultan, took over administration of the island in 1878. The quid pro quo was a British promise of aid if Russia attacked Turkey's eastern provinces. Cyprus still was part of the Ottoman Empire. However, four fifths of the island's Greek population appealed to the British to give them enosis — that is, union with Greece.

When World War I began, and Turkey joined the Central Powers, Cyprus was made part of the British Empire. England offered the island to Greece a year later, on condition that the Greeks would help the Serbians if they were invaded by the Bulgarians. Greece declined the deal and the offer was withdrawn.

After the war, in 1925, Cyprus became a British crown colony.

Greek Cypriot demands for enosis now began gathering steam, and when major demonstration took place in 1931 — the legislature was dissolved and the British governor exercised all power.

Throughout World War II, Cyprus sustained only minor enemy air attacks. Cypriot troops served in Greece, Italy, France and the Middle East.

The postwar period saw a renewed flareup of agitation for enosis, and Archbishop Makarios, patriarch of the island's Orthodox Church, took over leadership of the movement. Turkey took extreme offense at this development, and the way was paved for the struggle which would erupt in the current dramatic Turco-Greek confrontation.

An atmosphere of discontent, conspiracy and terrorism spread over the island after a conference in London in 1955 failed to solve the problem. A former officer of the Greek Army, George Grivas, took command of an organization on Cyprus dedicated to enosis. The group launched a wave of attacks against the British authorities. Reinforcements were rushed in from London, and emergency laws were enacted.

Makarios was exiled to the Seychelles Islands the following year. He was given his freedom three years later on condition he stay away from Cyprus. At this time, the Turkish Cypriots demanded that Cyprus be partitioned into Greek and Turkish states.

A deadlock followed and terrorism flared up to greater and greater heights, which provoked more and more repression by the British. In 1958, Makarios suggested that Cyprus should become an independent state after an agreed-upon term of self-government.

A meeting between Greek and Turkish representatives in Zurich the next year led to an agreement in principle on the Makarios proposal. Britain okayed it, and the new republic was established. The constitution called for the president to be a Greek Cypriot and the vice president a Turkish Cypriot. The first general election took place in 1960, and Makarios became the first president. Cyprus was then admitted as a member of the British Commonwealth of Nations.

By 1963 the constitution showed itself inadequate, as the result of intense disagreements between the Greek and Turkish elements. Riots broke out during Christmas week and British troops were brought in.

The United Nations Security Council consented to send in a peacekeeping force in March, 1964, and most of the fighting between the two factions temporarily abated.

But the two sides swiftly resumed hostilities and carried them on intermittently for the next 10 years. As time passed, many Greeks both in Greece and on Cyprus came to believe that President Makarios was not pressing hard enough for enosis. This conviction became a major source of dissension.

Makarios was viewed with intense suspicion by the military junta which ruled Greece in the 1970's. Their belief that the Cyprus president was deeply antagonistic to enosis led to the coup on July 15, 1974. Greek army troops on the island seized power and Makarios fled.

Official guilty of embezzlement

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A U.S. District Court jury convicted the administrator of the Comprehensive Health Planning Council of Los Angeles on charges of embezzling $25,000 in federal funds and submitting an altered financial statement to cover up the crime.

Leon L. Miller, 51, of West Los Angeles, allegedly spent the money for personal use and falsified a financial statement before submitting it to the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, which funds the council.

Sow winter crops now for rich harvesting

This is the year more people than ever are reaping a harvest of fresh garden vegetables. You may be taking in your crop now, but don't overlook continuing the harvest into winter by raising cool season vegetables.

Several of the cool season varieties are available now at nurseries in flats, ready to be transplanted. Members of the California Association of Nurserymen carry plants of Broccoli, Cauliflower, Lettuce, Brussel Sprouts and Cabbage. In addition, seed of such standbys as Beets, Carrots, Radishes and Turnips, Peas and Lettuce can be sown.

The idea of growing winter vegetables is the same as that of growing winter annuals. The earlier you get them in next month, the more bountiful the harvest. The plants should have plenty of good growing weather to establish themselves before cold weather sets in.

Just because they are a "cool" season crop doesn't mean they can do without sun. They like the maximum amount, just as all of us do when the weather cools off.

Here's a guide for planting. For a family of four, the nurserymen suggest 10 to 12 plants each of Broccoli, Brussel Sprouts, Cabbage and Cauliflower. Space them two feet apart in rows. For Lettuce, a 20 foot row, with heading varieties spaced a foot apart, leafing varieties only half that much. Radishes mature in short order and are best picked when first ready, so plant five foot rows of them at one month intervals. A 30 foot row of Carrots spaced two inches apart; a 15 foot row of either Beets or Turnips spaced the same distance will do the trick.

You say you don't have the room? No problem, plant your cool season vegetables in raised beds, modular containers, hanging baskets or pots. You can have a productive harvest of cool season vegetables right on your patio.

Colonial decor

Blend old, new in kitchen

The renowned French chef Paul Bocuse once commented: "I perform best in my own kitchen where I fell most at home." Bocuse feels that a kitchen takes on the personality of its owner and, in return, becomes his inspiration. If this is so, then what better place for the creation of fine American cuisine than in a kitchen whose atmosphert breathes Americana?

Super-modern kitchens are fine but, today, it's possible to use "progress" in the past tense—combining the efficiency of modern appliances with the warmth of an old-fashioned, country-like kitchen—be it preparing stuffed pheasant or peanut butter sandwiches—are taking a nostalgic glance back to Colonial times and liking what they see. They see the warmth of barnsiding and stained beams on walls and ceilings and the rugged texture of natural and antiqued bricking setting off bright colors and patterns on walls and curtains.

From this basic, early-American decor, one may go forward or back in period with furnishings. Modern-minded A.I.D. designer Virginia Frankel looks t the clean lines of Syroco's LifeStyle designs. Made of sturdy, wipe-it-clean thermo plostic, the round glass-topped table and four chairs combine the two most important elements of contemporary design: pure lines and easy upkeep. In bright yellow, crisp white, as well as chocolate brown, they add the needed splash of color to a room shaded in earth tones of wood and brick. Pick it up even further with shiny copper utensils, dried plants and flowers and bowls of fresh fruit for a look that's the best of both worlds.

For traditional-thinkers, the best of one world is the best of all. For them, designer Sharon Meadows recommends kitchens furnished in an entirely period motif recalling times when it was the center of family activity. And, in truth, if the kitchen is going to be an enjoyable place to spend time, why spend only cooking time there? Why not use it as a household office, as well? A compact desk-and-hutch unit with coordinating "tote stool" is a tall, straight-lined design by Finishing Touch that's available in either oak or pine—a good place to catch upon menu planning, note writing and phone calls. Potting plants and arranging flowers can be accomplished in the kitchen, as well—in the dry sink area, a special niche with stone or brick countertops. Any time spent in the warmth of a Colonial kitchen is enhanced by a genuine tick-tocking grandfather or grandmother clock.

Seek Fair produce

Gardeners of La Verne are being called upon again to donate products of their gardens for the La Verne display at the Los Angeles County Fair. If possible, the committee of the Chamber of Commerce responsible for the display would like to continue using only those things which have been grown in La Verne.

The display this year will feature a 1923 Ford delivery truck with a load of boxes of fruits and vegetables. Also to be noted in the display is La Verne's continuing recognition of the national Bicentennial celebration. The award winning logo created by Carol Belcher for the Bicentennial in La Verne will be shown in a large rendering.

As in previous years La Verne residents including councilmen commissioners, committee persons and representatives from the community will serve as hosts throughout the fair. Some 102 persons have already been assigned.

Teach tidiness

Children's clothes tree

Parents who experience difficulty teaching children to take better care of their clothes, should try a combination of craftsmanship plus word imagery. Both provide a psychological method of making contact with the mind of a child. A case in point is this easy to build wood giraffe clothes tree. When built according to the full size pattern offered below it creates a new character in the life of a child.

To make an effective contact with the child's mind, the pattern contains a Mother Goose style of story that tells how a stubborn little fellow refused to hang up his clothes. His mother kept insisting but he refused. He wouldn't do this and he wouldn't do that until one night he dreamed he had turned into a wooden clothes tree, one who helped little boys and girls hang up their clothes every night before going to bed.

Send $1.00 in check or money order made payable to Easi-Bild Pattern Co., Inc. for pattern No. 34 to Progress-Bulletin, P.O. Box 215, Briarcliff Manor, N.Y., 10510. Send $1.25 additional for 168 page catalog that illustrates more than 300 other build-it-yourself pattern projects and home improvement books.

2. It's bulb planting season and can nurseries have those which thrive in your area, and which will provide a springtime carnival of color in your garden.
3. Azaleas and Rhododendrons will want their final feeding of the year. Use a specially-prepared acid food for these spectacular bloomers.
4. Don't prune Grapes just because the crop is gone. Pruning should wait until the plants are dormant — during the winter months.
5. Feed lawns regularly to keep them green, healthy and pest and disease resistant. Commercial fertilizers are available which contain insecticides and fungicides. These feed and provide weed and-or insect control at the same time.

Return of roll-top

Good news for lovers but not keepers of neatness is the return of the roll-top desk. Finishing Touch, the company which specializes in all those accent pieces which "make a room," is updating the old roll-top in several styles and finishes from a formal burl to rustic pine or oak. Papers, books, ballpoint pens, a chicken sandwich are all easily concealed with a roll of the slatted tambour cover at the first sign of an approaching visitor. It's a stylish way to hide the mess and memorabilia which tend to collect on every desk.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Extra effort pays extra dividends at the present. Don't grumble if the boss asks you to put in a little overtime this weekend.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Toward evening things will begin perking up for you considerably. Keep your plans loose, as you may want to make a change.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Things will be a little more active around your house than you counted on. This will be due to some drop-ins you'll be entertaining.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) An outside interest will be clamoring for your attention. You won't mind. It's a fun-way of keeping busy.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You have a great deal more reserve to draw upon in competitive situations than you give yourself credit for. Keep striving if you want to be first.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Don't waste time wondering if what you're thinking about will work. Try it. If you make a mistake, worry about it then.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) The encouragement and pat on the back you're looking for from one behind-the-scenes will be coming. It will help you get up a full head of steam.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Be sure to associate with active people today. You're not in the mood to be tied down with those who tend to drag their feet.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Now is the time to call attention to yourself for something you've handled efficiently. Be sure the right party knows who is entitled to the credit.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) This is a good day to get together with one you haven't seen as much of lately as you should. There's a lot to talk over.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Don't be a pantywaist about standing up for what you believe. Just because the other guy's louder, it doesn't make him right.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) The ideas of one you'll be talking to will inspire you. File them away for reference. You'll soon want to use them.

This coming year you'll pursue new knowledge in order to advance your self-interest more successfully. Large strides will be made with the help of what you learn.

PUC approves rate hikes for four airlines

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Because of increased costs of fuel, the state Public Utilities Commission has permitted four air lines to raise their fares within California.

Air California was authorized Wednesday to boost its fares by 5.8 per cent, which means that a trip between San Diego and Oakland will cost $29.50, instead of $28.

Pacific Southwest Airlines was permitted to increase its fares by 4 per cent, which means a trip between Los Angeles and San Francisco will cost $20.78 instead of $20.

Western Airlines and United Air Lines were permitted to charge the same rates on routes where they compete with PSA and Air California.

The increases will become effective in five days.

Membership meeting charted by Hadassah

Sharon Chapter of Hadassah has completed plans for a membership breakfast social Wednesday at 9:30 a.m.

Members and prospective members will meet at 772 Via Santa Catarina, Claremont, and will be greeted by Mrs. Robert Sweet and Mrs. Sol Sweet, hostesses.

"Make Time for Hadassah" will be discussed by Mrs. Hal Rubin, membership chairman for the Southern Pacific Coast Region of Hadassah, a problem familar to the family and community-minded young Jewish woman.

Mrs. Rubin will draw on her own experience as a mother of two teen-age sons, as an aspiring novelist and a woman actively involved in Hadassah to indicate ways in which women can schedule time for the organization and feel the rewards engendered by helping people.

The speaker is a past president of the Santa Ana-Tustin Chapter of Hadassah and has served as regional recording secretary.

Reservations for the breakfast are being accepted by Mrs. Abraham Wodinsky, membership chairman, 626-5650, and Mrs. Jack Berens, 987-5294. Anyone interested in Hadassah may attend the breakfast.

Ask Dr. Brothers

Out of frying pan

By DR. JOYCE BROTHERS

Dear Dr. Brothers: Four years ago, my husband got into trouble with the law and was sent to jail. He served his term, paid his debt to society and is now home with the family. We have two young sons and, naturally, they missed their father very much while he was in prison. I kept them away from the institution where their father was serving time because I didn't want them to know about his problems. I want them to love and look up to him and to know that they can always be proud of their father.

I am furious because last week a next-door neighbor, who is a real busybody, told the boys about my husband's jail term. I don't know what to do about the whole situation but I do know I can't have her poisoning my sons' minds about this matter that is so important to us.—A.M.,

It takes a very strong individual to admit a mistake and to change for the better. Children who realize that their parents are not perfect are probaly better prepared for life than children who are taught that adults, and their parents in particular, can do no wrong. If children grow up and then become aware that people are not perfect, they may reject everything their parents stand for and consider them hypocritical. Just as children should know that they are loved and respected even though they may make mistakes, so they should also learn to love and respect their parents despite imperfections.

Make a point of calling your neighbor and explaining how you feel about maintaining a close relationship between your boys and their father. Since male children identify so closely with the adult male in the family, it's extremely important that they be encouraged to see the positive qualities of their father. You may be able to appeal to her good qualities if you ask for her support in this respect. No matter what type of person she is, you'll probably get much further if you approach her in this way than you would if you lost your temper.

This neighbor might be interested in knowing that studies have indicated that the characteristics that lead a person to criminal behavior may be the same as those that bring success in business. According to a study by a Rutgers University team of sociologists, such characteristics as a desperate need for independence of action, a reluctance to conform and a certain daring nature may account for both business success and delinquency.

In a federally funded study of 22 ex-convicts, it was discovered that when the ex-convicts were set up in small businesses they had an unusually high rate of success even though only six had had previous business experience. They all did surprisingly well considering the high failure rate for small businesses throughout the country.

As a general rule, lies and deception are as dangerous when dealing with children as they are when dealing with adults. Honesty works much better in the long run. Parents who want to establish good communications with their children must make sure, however, that while they're being honest, they also help their children to understand all of the positive factors in any given situation. Honesty that stresses only the negative facts can be dangerous and emotionally damaging.

The measuring worm is a green or brown insect that crawls by looping its whole body every time it takes a step.

It is called a measuring worm because it seems to be measuring the distance it moves with each step.

Of course, the measuring worm isn't really a worm. It is the caterpillar of a delicate, butterflylike moth. It grows to be less than an inch long.

The measuring worm has two pairs of feet less than the caterpillars of other moths.

As a result, it creeps along by stretching its body forward as far as it can. Then it brings its back feet up to touch its front feet, making a loop, and then stretches out again.

Other popular names for the measuring worm are inchworm, spanworm and looper.

The measuring worm is a menace because it damages many trees by eating their spring leaves. Many birds eat measuring worms and thus help destroy this pest.

A pocket radio, camera, World Almanac globe or other fine prize will be awarded to the first youngster sending in a question used here. Send your question and your age to Johnny Wonder, (c/o this newspaper), Box 1335 (DA), Santa Cruz, CA 95061.

High coupon tax exempts

By Roger Spear and David Sargent

Q — I am interested primarily in eating money as a senior citizen looking at that century mark. There seem to be some good high coupon municipals around with BBB or Baa ratings. Admit this quality is not tops and as a former conservative banker I have hesitated to take the plunge. What do you think of San Francisco Airport Improvement 8s of 2013? — W.C.

A — As long as you are aware of the degree of risk involved and are willing to give up something by way of safety in order to gain income, I would agree that this quality tax exempt makes sense. These revenue bonds are a lease obligation of United Air Lines, a subsidiary of UAL, Inc. They are a senior debt obligation of the company, and therefore take precedence over subordinated deblt, which amounted to 13% of capitalization. Interest and principal is payable solely from lease rentals paid by the airline to a trustee.

According to the offering statement the coverage of fixed charges and interest was 2.3x in 1973. The 8% coupon is equivalent to 11.1 for a married taxpayer in the 25% bracket (taxable income of $12,000 to $16,000) or 9.9% in a 19% bracket. By all means check around with dealers to get the best possible price before buying.

Q — I understand that that the bonds recently sold by Citicorp and Chase are not insured by the Federal Reserve. Do they take preference over the common stock? — M.S.

A — The new floating rate notes are the unsecured obligations of these holding companies. They are not insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. as are savings deposits in their respective banking subsidiaries. Because these notes are debt of the corporation, they do take preference over the common stock in the event of bankruptcy or in the payment of dividends.

Although the liquidity and strength for the baking industry as a whole has deteriorated somewhat, both of the above appear to be in good condition. Earnings and dividends have increased consistently in recent years.

Q—Can you give me information on Federal Intermediate Credit Bank bonds? Are they tax-free? Do you think they are a good investment?—O.W.

Debt instruments of the Federal Intermediate Credit Banks are exempt from state and local taxes, but are subject to Federal taxation. Bonds and notes are sold in $5,000 minimum amounts and are in bearer form. Since this means they are payable on demand to the holder, you should safeguard them as carefully as you would cash. The most recent issue, $713.5 million in bonds due June 2, 1975, carried a 9.80 per cent coupon, a record rate for this government-sponsored enterprise. While not directly guaranteed by the government, these debt securities are generally regarded as second in terms of safety to government debt issues.

Broadway blues

Where have the playwrights gone?

By JACK GAVER

NEW YORK (UPI) — The British influence on the Broadway theater again will be strong this new season, at least in the first half.

This reminder causes one to think back and wonder why there is no such American strength as in the past when there were plays and more plays every season by such as Maxwell Anderson, Robert Sherwood, Elmer Rice, Sidney Howard, S. N. Behrman and a few slightly lesser lights capable of healthy productivity.

Oh, I know all of the arguments about the changing economic situation affecting the theater that discourages playwrights from prolific output because of the difficulty in financing serious plays.

But somehow I feel that this is a crutch that the newer American playwrights use to disguise laziness, lack of inspiration and so on. Arthur Miller, Tennessee Williams, Edward Albee and the like take too much time between plays. They, and their potential producers, are afraid of failure. They plead artistic contemplation. Bunk.

The playwrights mentioned in the second paragraph did not always turn out hits, not by a long shot. they worked, and producers produced their output.

And the new, new playwrights, mostly spawn off off-Broadway, while prolific enough on paper, are not writing full-length dramas. Mostly, they write sketches, limp one acters. They are afraid, or incapable, for the most part in coming to grips with full-length dramas that some of them, as indicated by their fragmentary efforts, would seem capable of writing on being contemporarily meaningful that they wind up being messily meaningless.

In Britain, there seem to be numerous playwrights who keep turning out plays at a steady rate and getting them produced. A lot of them are flops, even at home; you'd never want to see them brought over here; too provincial in many cases. Don't wait two, three, five years between plays, good, bad or in different, flop or success.

The sole American exception is Neil Simon. He's in there every season with a new play. Usually, he has a winner. Even if he misses once in while, he's to be blessed for keeping at it.

Among the early British imports for the new Broadway season are "In Praise of Love," a drama by the veteran and prolific Terence Rattigan that will star Rex Harrison and Julie Harris; the all-male Shakesperean "As You Like It;" Alan Ayckbourns "Absurd Person, Singular, with U.S. natives Richard Kiley, Sandy Dennis, Geraldine Page, Larry Blyden and Tony Roberts, and the Royal Shakespeare Companys revival of Dion Boucicault's 19th century comedy, "London Assurance."

★ ★ ★

One outstanding American playwright, Edward Albee, who should write more often even if he gets an occasional cool reception, will have a new drama, "Seascape." Britain's Deborah Kerr and our Barry Nelson will star in it. Miss Kerr has not been on Broadway since she starred in 1953 in Robert Andersons "Tea and Sympathy," a big hit.

And theres an American playwright of merit who should have something going for him every season, good, bad or indifferent. He had contributed occasionally since "Tea and Sympathy,' but not often enough.

MOTOWN MIRACLES — The popular Motown Records soul group, the Miracles, will perform in the John Wayne Theater of Knott's Berry Farm next Friday through Sunday. The group's first gold record was "Shop Around" in the late 1950s. The current hit is "Do It, Baby." The Sons of the Pioneers, celebrating its 40th year in show business, will appear in the Farm's Sundown Showcase Sept. 14.

Maazel conducting

Cleveland Orchestra at Bowl

While Zubin Mehta and the Los Angeles Philharmonic are on a tour of Europe, the Cleveland Orchestra, conducted by Lorin Maazel, will complete the Hollywood Bowl's 10th and final week starting Tuesday.

The first program will be devoted to the complete ballet scores of Stravinsky's "The Firebird" and Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe," the latter with the Roger Wagner Chorale. On Thursday, Maazel and the Cleveland Orchestra will offer an all-Sibelius concert, featuring the Violin Concerto with young violinist Daniel Heifetz as soloist, as well as the Finnish composer's "Karelia" Suite and Symphony No. 1 in E minor.

On Friday and Saturday, the season will close with the now-traditional "Music for the Royal Fireworks" by Handel in its original wind band version, with a spectacular fireworks display. Featured soloist on the program at the two concerts will be pianist Earl Wild, playing Gershwin's Concerto in F and Liszt's Hungarian Fantasy. The orchestra will also be heard in Barber's overture, "The School for Scandal," and Bernstein's "Facisimile."

Maazel is beginning his third season as music director and conductor of the Cleveland Orchestra. Last season, in addition to regular concerts in Cleveland, he led the orchestra's annual East Coast tour of 13 concerts.

Gentlemen:

This is a letter of compliment of the highest order for one of your store owners. The man, Andy Holifield, has taken care of every need that my cycling family (we have 6 Schwinn bicycles) has had, and always with a smile and great knowledge of his products.

His choice of help that works at his shop are also fine people and do excellent repair work. His store is one of the cleanest stores I have ever seen, and I have lived on the East coast as well as on the West coast.

I want to thank you for having a man of such quality in your organization.

Toughest battle for the military

By TOM TIEDE

WASHINGTON (NEA) — The thrice-weekly meetings of the Joint Chiefs of Staff are held in a room that would probably surprise most Americans. "The Tank," as the office is called, or Room 2 Echo 934 of the Pentagon, has no situation-map decor, no radar-screen images of the Dew Line, in fact, nothing at all Strangelovian or strategic.

Rather, the chamber fits somewhere between the categories of executive suite and Romper Room. There is of course the mandatory walnut conference table, the formal leather chairs, the ready phones which connect all 20 epaulet stars to the disorderly outside world—but there are also pads and pencils for doodling, a thick rug for the scuffing of toes and five dishes filled with Hershey bits and hard candy.

The differences may be apt and even revealing. Contrary to popular thought, the Joint Chiefs do not convene in a war room but a corporation chamber. Their job is not to juggle megatons, but to jawbone the worries and directions of the world's biggest company.

The frustrations of such that the snack candy and doodle pads, (one former chief used to draw lovely flowers) are as vital, as one general puts it, "as they'd be for anyone discussing the impossible."

Impossible is perhaps too final a word for accuracy, but indeed the five JCS members—the heads of the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marines plus a chairman—do have their difficulties of function. Theirs is the task of determining today what will happen tomorrow.

Their responsibility by law is not to make policy, which is comparatively simple and not to determine immediate budgets, which would be kind of fun, but instead to look as far down the road as possible to see where the American armed forces will or should stand in relation to the forces of Russia, China, Mars or any other potential adversary.

The history of the Joint Chiefs—its concept of service unity was conceived during World War II and formally established in 1947—indicates the American borders from foreign aggression.

Yet as they munch their sweets in concert each Monday, Wednesday and Friday afternoons, the Chiefs are aware they are not altogether loved by a solidly grateful America. There is now and has been for years a large body of thought which suspects the nation could have survived without ever a sug- the generals have done a fair to middling job. At least they have succeeded in their primary mission: making enough correct suggestions to secure gestion from the JCS. What's more, much of this thought has been held by the nation's highest leaders.

Joint Chief of Staff's influence definitely eroded

Thus it is as the military establishment has once again completed the rite of shuffling its leaders. Three new members of the JCS have recently been named and questions are again being raised as to the future of unified command. Critics feel the JCS function is now largely ritualistic.

There is little argument that JCS influence has, as ex-chairman Thomas Moorer says, "been eroded." Gone are the glory days when President Truman would regularly get JCS approval for military decisions (as in the firing of Douglas MacArthur). President Eisenhower, too, held the chiefs in high regard. Since the 1950s however, the prestige of the unified commanders has wobbled between only moderate and almost nil.

At least some of the wounding of JCS influence has been self-inflicted. The group is private to the point of being impenetrable. No newsmen attend sessions and even aides are sometimes locked out. "People don't understand what we do," agrees Army Chief Creighton Abrams (now deceased). Thus public suspicion is cultivated by ignorance. "What we need is public relations," says a staff assistant, "so the folks in Oshkosh don't think all we do is barter tanks for airplanes or plot 'Seven Days in May.' "

But public suspicion is not confined to the folks on Oshkosh. Presidents, too, have been skeptical of the JCS. John Kennedy for one. Following his own military experiences during World War II (including the loss of his brother Joe in a fatal Army flight experiment), Kennedy was so pessimistic about the services in general he wrote a friend of "the superhuman ability of the Navy to screw up everything." God save the nation, he added, "from the patriots whose war cry is: 'What this country needs is military efficiency.' "His opinion never changed.

It's not surprising, then, that Kennedy chose a defense secretary who held equally skeptical views concerning the armed forces. Together they formed a civilian defense force that came to regard the Joint Chiefs almost with contempt.

"The trouble with McNamara," says the retired chairman Admiral Moorer, "was that he told us what to do and how to do it." Another former Chief recalls with contempt a McNamara aid's boast that the personally could "make or break any general in the Pentagon" with a small note to the President.

Kennedy broke completely with the Chiefs after the Bay of Pigs fiasco. The President was so angry at what he considered to be sophomoric input from the Chiefs for that engagement that he admonished them to, henceforth, "Base your advice not on the military consideration alone, but on broad-based political and economic factors as well."

Things did not pick up under Lyndon Johnson. His press aide, Bill Moyers, believes "President Johnson relied less on his military advisers than any president since Wilson." So in charge of the military was Johnson personally that during the Vietnam war he is said to have told a White House guest: "I'd like to have a scotch and water right now. But I can't — I've got planes out tonight." Generals still complain of being left out of Johnson's wartime confidence.

There are those on the Joint Chiefs now who feel bottom has been touched in the group's relations with chief executives, and JCS influence is again on the ascent. Though former President Nixon clearly relied more on his own advisers than the JCS—he bombed Cambodia on the suggestion of his ad hoc Washington Area Task Force—generals say the civilian-military relationships have been improving.

BRIEFING — National Military Command Center at Pentagon.

Defending U.S. with paperwork

By Tom Tiede

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — In 1970 an insurance executive named Gilbert Fitzhugh chaired a blue-ribbon panel assigned to review the management and organization of the Department of Defense. In its report; the panel made 131 recommendations for change — many of which were directed at the Joint Chiefs of Staff, a body which the probers found "ponderous and slow," "awkward and unresponsive," and so impossible to administer than "frankly, we're amazed it works at all."

Since then, says Fitzhugh, now in Arizona retirement, 33 of the recommendations have been adopted, 42 have been accepted in principle, 12 rejected and 212 are still under consideration. None of the figures, however, has affected the Joint Chiefs. Nothing ever changes in the JCS, sighs Fitzhugh, except the names on the uniforms.

Indeed, Fitzhugh feels, change may be impossible under the present JCS structure: "You see, the truth is that everybody is in charge of everything in the JCS, so nobody's in charge of anything."

A critic other thanthe panel chairman suggests that confusion is so primary to the service unity group, "the only way we can get anywhere would be to cut orders for all the thousands of JCS people, put them on a very large ship, send them away and start all over."

It would have to be a large ship indeed. From humble beginnings in 1947 when the JCS consisted of its chiefs and 100 officers, plus small staffs for each of the services, the group has grown into the largest corporate body in the world. The Joint Chiefs staff now numbers at least 2,-

For sports fans, inflation may actually contribute to better TV sportscasts. In earlier days, major sporting events could be televised at a cost that permitted a single advertiser to sponsor the entire show. Remember when Gillette's "Look sharp . . . feel sharp . . . be sharp" brought us the entire World Series?

Today, with soaring costs and multi-million dollar contracts, baseball's World Series has over 30 different sponsors! No one of these is in a position to dictate broadcast policy. Announcers are more free to interject opinions and discuss "controversial" aspects of baseball and all televised sports.

HISTORIC SITE IN JEOPARDY — The Broadwater Hotel in Helena, Mont., one of the 10 historic sites in the United States listed in critical jeopardy by the National Trust for Historic Preservation, will be up for piecemeal auction Sept. 21-22, then torn down, its owner Norman Rogers announced. The hotel resort cost more than $500,000 when it was built in 1889 by Col. Charles Broadwater.

Defending the U.S. with paperwork

000 men with each service contributing a staff of some 8,000. And there are dozens, perhaps hundreds, of related subsidiary staffs throughout the military enterprise.

The numbers, Fitzhugh says, constitute one of the primary JCS dilemmas. "It's become a bureaucratic nightmare."

One small indication of the complexity of the operation is the way routine business is conducted; a former JCS staffer describes it this way: "A lot of the work is research, right? Well, so whenever the JCS conducts a study, each of the services also initiates a study of the same thing — so that they can protect their interests. All of these studies, furthermore, are conducted on multilevels and often several groups within one group investigates the same thing from different angles.

"The resulting paperwork activity is probably at least enough to bury Moscow three feet under carbon copies. Each probing group of each probing group turns in a preliminary report on 'flimsy' paper, later they add to the files a reworked version on 'built' paper, finally, God willing, they finish their efforts on 'green paper. It is said that years sometimes pass between the flimsy and green and that usually the entire project is eventually filed away and forgotten," he said.

Fitzhugh's panel condemned this system for its inherent inefficiencies and duplications of effort. And it also pointed out the waste involved in diverting thousands of soldiers from normal duty. Finallly, the probers suggested such bureaucracy works against the best interests of the nation's defense by fostering interservice rivalry (each service trying to "outpaperwork" the other) which may inhibit the free flow of information to civilian decision-makers.

Not surprisingly, present Joint Chiefs deny that interservice rivalry affects the quality of their suggestions to the secretary of Defense. Army Chief Creighton Abrams says flatly that "It's our job to rise above that kind of thing."

Nevertheless, says Fitzhugh, the evidence is to the contrary. He believes "many staff officers" related to the JCS feel they must put their own service above the JCS, "If they don't they jeopardize their chances for promotion."

It's true, says a former JCS aide named Edward King: "I went through it myself. JCS people are called 'purple suiters' because they are supposed to belong to the over-all military and not just one service or the other. However, when I was there I remember making a recommendation on paper that the Army reduce the size of its military advisory staff in Latin America. Shortly after, I was called in by a senior Army officer who advised me against future recommendations of the kind. I remember he said, 'You may think your uniform is purple, but we both know it's green (Army).' His point was very clear."

The point is also clear to to JCS critics who believe such severe parochialism to be chauvinistically dangerous to the historic U.S. concept of civilian control over military matters. Fitzhugh points out that the staff bureaucracies in each of the Joint Chiefs services are larger and more powerful than the single Joint Staff and that all of these elements are larger and more powerful than the office of the Defense secretary. Thus, gripes Fitzhugh, "the Defense secretary must rely on the military staffs, rather than his own, for operational direction. The situation is just not a very good one."

Why isn't it? Because of the risk that any service or all services might for the sake of military expediency present the Defense secretary with inaccurate or at least narrowviewed information. This in turn, in the chain of command, might be passed up to the president as the only option available. Shrugs an assistant on the staff of the Senate Armed Forces committee, "History has had more than one war started because of plots by underlings to manipulate information."

For his part, JCS critic Fitzhugh does not believe either the civilian or military chiefs are getting deliberately inaccurate information. He suggests the way to do it is to cut out the fat, streamline the apparatus and minimize the advisory system of Joint Chiefs deliberation. Too much emphasis has been put on getting bigger, he says; it should be put on getting better.

So saying, Fitzhugh has joined a long list of men who would clean the cobwebs from the machinery of the JCS. And so doing, he has failed. Indeed, his report is now buried among those untouched webs. "Civilians will never convince the chiefs they need to change," says one ex-member of the body. "Only the military itself can do that. And I would guess, given the right people, that will one day happen. I would also guess that when it does, all of the changes will be criticized too."

Wasn't much for arts, says Ford

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford admits he once had little appreciation for the arts until he was "converted" by his wife, Betty.

Ford made that admission Wednesday night when he went to the Kennedy Center to see the Broadway-bound musical "Mack and Mable," presented to celebrate the 10th anniversary of the National Council of the Arts.

The Fords were greeted by shouts of "bravo" and received a long round of applause when they appeared in the presidential box. In fact, Robert Preston, the star of the performance, later noted that Ford got more applause than he did.

The light and lively musical was a takeoff on the lives of Mack Sennett, whose Hollywood comedies were symbolic of the beginning of movies, and silent movie star Mable Norman. Ford said this suited his mood.

During a brief reception, the President said he once had "little or no appreciation of the arts." But he added that his wife, a former Martha Graham dancer, helped him become a "converted individual."

"I don't apologize for it," he said. "Converts are often more ardent than those brought up in the environment."

Mrs. Ford studied ballet at the age of 8 and was one of the Martha Graham dancers before she married Ford.

The Fords also posed for pictures with the daughters and sons-in-law of three other Presidents —Margret Truman Daniel and her husband Clifton Daniel, the Washington Bureau chief of the New York Times; Lynda Bird Johnson Robb and her husband, Charles Robb, and Julie Nixon Eisenhower and David Eisenhower.

Seat belt kills Aloha vacation

By ERMA BOMBECK

ON VACATION IN HAWAII: Having read James Michener, I was led to believe Hawaii was threatened with destruction by over-zealous missionaries who brought disease, clothes and a bunch of drunken sailors led by Richard Harris who chased Julie Andrews around the island until she couldn't stop coughing.

After spending a week on this island, I don't believe a word of it.

Hawaii is plagued by a fleet of rental cars with new seat belts that will eventually drive their tourists screaming crazy right into the surf.

Our family was in pretty good spirits when we landed on what we called "our last family vacation together." (If you're keeping score, this is the sixth "last family vacation together" in as many years.) We rented a car, stuffed the luggage in the trunk and all piled in.

My husband turned the key and said, "All right, who isn't buckled up?"

"We are all buckled up," said the kids.

"Nonsense," he said. "If we were all buckled up the motor would start and the buzzer wouldn't hum. What about you?" he asked me suspiciously.

"Look for yourself," I said.

He reached down to check. "You're the one. You have your belt hooked into the center seat strap. That's why the car won't start."

"Then where is mine?"

"You're sitting on it?"

I broke a nail releasing the belt and as the strap sprung back into position, the shoulder harness pinned me to the seat parlayzing my left shoulder and chopping me across the windpipe.

"It's humming again," said my daughter.

"Of course, it's humming," snarled my husband. "Your mother won't buckle up."

"It won't reach," I gasped.

"It'll reach," said my son irritably. "You just have to get it all the way in and start from the beginning."

"When are we going to see the ocean?" a voice whined.

My husband got out of the car. "Here," he said. "You have to pull it all the way out and around. What is your leg doing here? Get the sun visor out of her face. You just poked your mother's eye out."

Romantic Hawaii where you can listen to the buzz of the seat belt sign, see the bright red warning light illuminate the sky, relax in a bikini seat belt while your varicose veins throb, and watch the sun set over the car rental parking lot.

Aloha to you, fella.

Seven on party line go ape over jibberish on telephone

NORTH PRAIRIE, Wis. (UPI) — Your job: investigate the jabberwocky on one of those eight-party telephones in the Lauderdale Lakes area in Walworth County.

The seven other party line users—while used to hearing or overhearing some strange talk —were upset by the strange chattering and twittering sounds on the line when it was out of service.

Service calls came into the southern district office of the North-West Telephone Co. They sent a man, and he just happened to be in the area when the next outage report came in.

He rang the bell at the home where the outage was suspected. Nothing. He looked through a window. Something.

The telephone was off the hook, and chattering and twittering into the receiver was a monkey. The owner of the house was inclined to give the monkey the run of the house while he was at work.

The company advised the man to tether the monkey hereafter and keep him away from the phone.

104, he wants to dance at grandchildren's wedding

BELLEVUE, Mich. (UPI) — Dan Olmstead, a retired blacksmith and farmer, celebrated his 104th birthday Monday at a family bash given by members of his voluminous family.

Olmstead took advantage of the occasion to practice his dancing.

"With more than a hundred grandchildren," he said. "I have to keep up on my dancing so I can dance at their weddings."

Olmstead, after hours of tripping the light fantastic, admitted "I've slowed down a bit."

Olmstead lives alone on the farm where he and his wife, who died in 1958, raised their 10 children.

Olmstead has made some other concessions to old age. Three years ago, he stopped driving a car and now lets "some of my grandchildren clean up the house now and then."

Olmstead first voted when he was 21. He said he generally votes for the man instead of the party although he leans toward the Republican party.

"I hope I am around for the next presidential election," he said, adding, however, that "ballplayers and politicians aren't what they used to be."

German fashion

COLOGNE, Germany (UPI) — Soccer player Franz Beckenbauer and conductor Herbert von Karajan are among the best dressed men in West Germany, according to the Institute for Men"s Fashion.

The list included a prominent TV personality, a disc jockey and politicians. Beckenbauer, 27, considered one of the best players in the world, skippered West Germany to the 1974 World Championship in July.

Soldiers of Switzerland

Client asks how Switzerland trains its army. Every man there has to take four months of military basic at the age of 20, then serve three weeks a year until age 32, two weeks a year until age 42, and finally remain in the reserves thereafter. Nobody is exempt except for medical reasons, and even such patients pay a special tax each year in lieu of service.

REMEMBER, Israel offered Arab women the right to vote even before any Arab country did likewise . . . PRETTY WELL preserved, that Venus de Milo, considering she's 2,076 years old . . . NOT ALL BUT many dentists say that round toothpicks are better than flat ones.

ANTIQUE

Q. "I've heard repeatedly that no piece of furniture should be described as an antique unless it was made before 1830. Why that date?"

A. Because that was the year mass production factory methods were introduced in the furniture business. Earlier articles all were made by hand. Don't believe the notion holds, however, that nothing manufactured subsequently can be described as antique.

AM ASKED WHY matrimonial partners never walk side by side in New Guinea. Any display of affection is frowned upon there. That's why. To be seen kissing or holding hands, of course, would be an outrage. But even a stroll together down the jungle trail would be too apt to betray some feelings of fondness.

GRAPE JUICE

You start out as grape juice. Whether you turn into vinegar or wine is somewhat up to you. Who originated that trite old notion? Nobody recent, clearly. It has been around a long time.

ONLY PROFESSIONAL golfer to give away all of the winner's purse is Gary Player. In 1965, remember that? After taking the U.S. Open. He donated $20,000 to junior golf in this country, and $5,000 to cancer research, a tribute to his mother.

NOT LIKELY you know a doctor who ever witnessed a case of that rare nervous disease called miaryachit. Occurs only among orientals, I'm told. Symptoms are spectacular. Patients involuntarily mimic the voices and actions of people around them.

'Sandals' will save dog's feet at beach

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: Last year at the beach, the sand wore Patsy's pads raw. She was so happy to play there, we couldn't keep her quiet. What can we do to keep the same thing from happening to our pooch this year?—J.F.

Dear J.F.: Your veterinarian might prescribe a "foot toughener" solution which, if applied daily over a period of time, will indeed toughen the pads considerably. Otherwise, the use of "beach sandals"—actually open-toed leather booties made for dogs, could prove pad-savers, though these would have to be oiled frequently to retain their flexibility for such use.

DEAR DR. MILLER: One hummingbird which frequents our garden is surprisingly tame, but I guess that's not so surprising. What's really surprising is the way that bird can eat. It's either up at the hummingbird feeder, or down around the flowers, or chasing little bugs, practically all the time. Would that mean that it's bothered by worms or something? U.V.

Dear U.V.: Your pet hummer is probably bothered by hunger pains having nothing to do with parasites. The hummer who hasn't had a snack within a half an hour is very hungry. One who hasn't eaten for several hours is literally starving.

DEAR DR. MILLER: For several weeks this summer, friends visited us, bringing along their cat to play with ours. All went well after our hectic first day of introductions. I was shocked yesterday to get a letter indicating the cat that had been visiting us had just been put to sleep because of a disease called infectious feline peritonitis. Long before you receive this letter, we will have thoroughly cleaned up our house and had our cats checked. Is there anything else we can do toward keeping our cats from getting such a terrible disease? —D.F.

Dear D.F.: Feline infectious peritonitis remains an enigma as to transmission and treatment (which is invariably futile). In common with a typical leukemia in the cat, feline infectious peritonitis seems more likely to develop after the animal's resistance has been lowered by some form of severe stress. (The stress form might vary from fighting and-or injury to an upper respirtory virus). Realistically, there's probably little at this point you can do for your cats to protect them from this disease other than keeping them in the best possible health and so mairtaining maximum resistance. If they remain unstressed and in good health otherwise, they are less likely to break out with this (and other) viral-initiated diseases to which they have previously been exposed. Resistance factors within the body which are vital in holding dormant viruses at bay apparently would be changed or lost with stress, allowing the insidious virus to become active.

Bridge

Queen makes big entrance

By Oswald & James Jacoby

South started to make the automatic play of dummy's queen of spades at trick one. Then he stopped, saw that he just might need an extra entry to dummy and won in his own hand.

It was well that he did. As it was, dummy's entries lasted just long enough to bring the slam home.

Opening lead—J♠

South drew trumps with three leads and continued with the ace and five of clubs. Dummy's queen lost to East's king and a spade came back.

The trick was won by the queen which South had been careful to keep in dummy. Now he ruffed a third club; entered dummy with the ace of diamonds and ruffled the fourth club to set up the last club as a winner. He discarded dummy's three of diamonds on the last spade; ruffed a diamond with dummy's last trump; discarded his last diamond on the last club and was home with the bacon.

Girl's pals are jealous

By JEAN ADAMS

NICEST: (Q.) Ann is the nicest girl I ever knew. I like her more than any girl I have ever liked. We have had three dates and she has been very friendly.

But her friends tell me she doesn't really like me and just goes with me because one one else will ask her. What should I do? — Confused in North Carolina

Ignore them.

VICTIM: (Q.) I stayed at my sister's house to take care of her little girl while she went to the hospital to have a baby.

The third night her husband came in drunk and made me go to bed with him. It was awful.

That was two months ago. I'm not pregnant but I still feel dirty and guilty.

I haven't told anybody about it and I'm sure my brother-in-law hasn't either. What can I do to get it out of my mind? — 16 in Michigan.

(A.) You can tell yourself the truth, that you did not of your own choice do anything wrong and that you cannot help what was done to you.

Now that you have told me, I believe you will feel better and cleaner.

Avoid any contact with your brother-in-law that might lead to a repeat of what happened to you. If you see any possibility of a recurrence, you must tell your parents and ask them to help you.

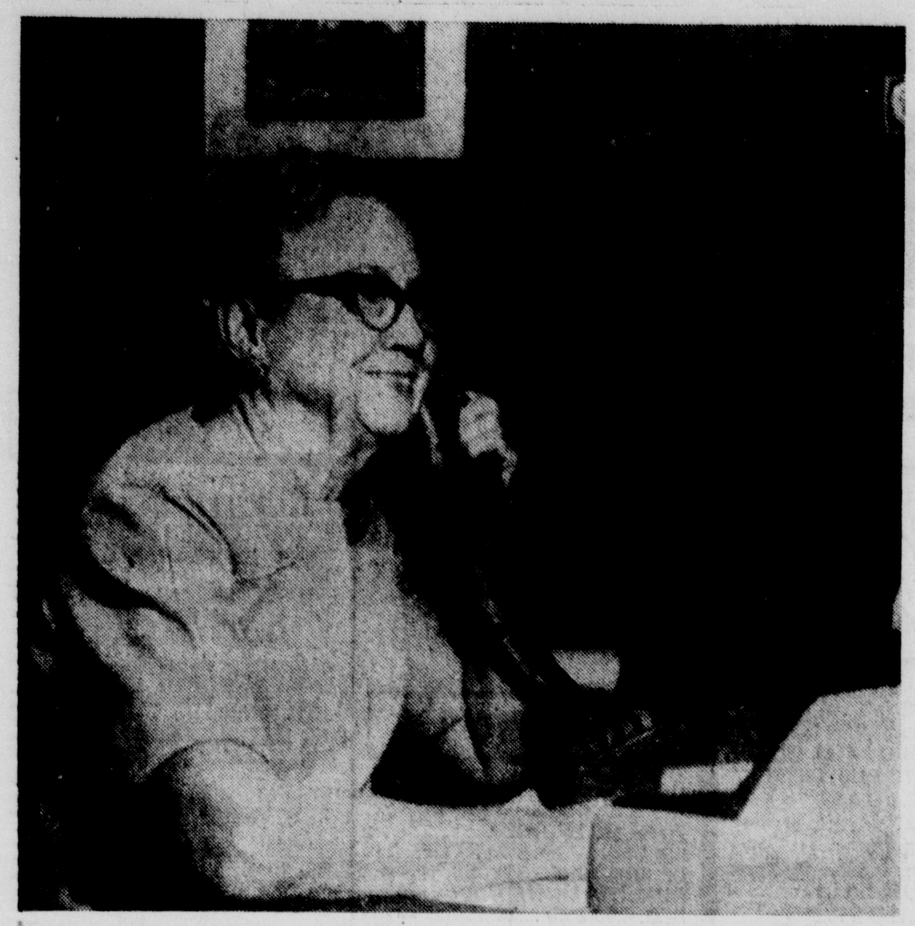
MONTGOMERY WARD



NO SENIOR CITIZENS HERE — When this century took its bow, Lucille Yates Lyons, of Tulsa, Okla., was already seven years old and working. Now, at 81, she still puts in a full eight-hour day as secretary and partner to her 72-year-old employer. Then at night she dons makeup as an actress in Tulsa's Spotlight Theater. Mrs. Lyons, who gives vitamins the credit for her continuous supply of energy, says there are still things she wants and will work to get.

Bank holdup hostage helps catch suspect

NEW YORK (UPI) — A Tennessee man was chased through midtown traffic and captured by a bank customer he held hostage during a robbery attempt recently at a bank, the police department reported.

A police spokesman identified the suspect as Jonnie William Powell, 29, of Memphis, Tenn., who was captured with the help of James Godwin, 20, of New York, after a three-cab pursuit through midtown traffic.

According to police, the suspect entered the Manhattan Savings Bank, at Vanderbilt Ave. and 45th St., at 11:20 a.m. Tuesday, produced a gun and demanded money from a teller.

Powell, the spokesman said, grabbed Godwin, who was standing in line, and threatened to shoot the customer unless the money was turned over.

The teller filled Powell's attache case with $10,000 and he fled taking three separate taxi cabs to the Chelsea Hotel on 23rd Street.

Godwin left the bank and followed close behind the holdup man, jumping in and out of cabs and shouting "follow that taxi," the spokesman said.

The spokesman said Godwin's first taxi drove him as far as 42nd St. and First Ave., where both men switched cabs. The second cab switch was made at 34th St. and Eighth Ave., while the third set of cabs took the suspect and his pursuer to the Chelsea Hotel, where the holdup man disappeared.

Godwin dashed to a phone and dialed the emergency police No. 911, bringing police to the hotel who searched the premises without success.

The spokesman said police, under Godwin's instructions, were looking for a man dressed in a neat pinstriped suit.

But, then Godwin spotted the robber leaving the hotel dressed in boots, white pants and a sports shirt, carrying a suitcase. Police later found the money, pin-striped suit and gun in the suitcase.

Oil operators look to users for financing

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — Independent oil operators hope industrial energy users will help finance increased drilling needed to halt an oil and gas production decline in the United States, according to today's issue of the Oil and Gas Journal.

Petrochemical companies and refiners are among end users that finance oil and gas exploration and production and they are growing in number each year, the magazine said.

The journal, said examples are Dow Chemical Co., which has the largest 1974 end-user financing program, W.R. Grace & Co. and E.I. Du Pont De Nemours & Co.

Other firms unrelated to the petroleum industry are beginning to creep into end-user financing, the industry magazine said.

Exampls are Ford Motor Co., automaking, and Adolph Coors Co., brewing.

These firms try to obtain fuel and feedstock to avoid costly cutbacks when natural gas deliveries are interrupted and petroleum feedstocks become scarce, the article said.

Jerome A. Lewis, president of Petro-Lewis Corp., a Denver independent operator, believe end users are the biggest potential source of future capital for independents.

He said untold billions in oil investment capital will be available in coming years from some of the 2,000 major industrial firms in the nation.

Don M. Lynn, head of Tulsa-based Independent Flynn Energy Corp., said, "total investments by end users are only now reaching a point equaled by gas company advance payments five years ago. Independents will see a big influx of end-users investments within the next two years."

But no end is seen for the traditional alliance between bankers and oil operators. Independents are still counting on bankers to finance a sizable part of their development programs, the journal said.

10 smokers win $50 each by quitting

CHICAGO (UPI) — Jim Miller lost a bet and $500 but he wished he had lost even more.

Miller, president of a suburban Spring Grove manufacturing firm, told his cigarette-smoking employes he would give $50 to any one of them who swore off cigarettes for a year.

Ten did and Miller is out $500.

"I'm delighted. I'm a converted nonsmoker myself and there is nothing worse than converts," he said with a chuckle. "I knew everybody means to give up smoking. It created an incentive."

Miller gave up his two-pack-a-day habit 20 years ago. He remembered quite well how difficult it was. When he found out last year 250 of the 700 employes at Intermatic Inc. smoked, he decided to do something.

"I bet everyone $50 dollars they couldn't stop smoking."

An "I Quit Smoking Club" was formed. Thirty-six men and women joined and their names were published in the firm's newsletter for the entire year. Those who failed to kick the habit got a line drawn through their name.

"You got a whole year of publicity," Miller said.

The club membership thinned out to 12 almost a year later. On the day of reckoning, two persons admitted they sneaked two or three cigarettes during the year.

"It was a fun thing to do. We don't want to interfere with anyone's lifestyle," Miller said. "It added a little spice and challenge."

He said he told the 10 new nonsmokers that, according to the American Cancer Society, they had added nine years to their lives.

"We created a 90-year-old person," he said.

Dodgers, Reds in showdown series

CINCINNATI (UPI) — The Los Angeles Dodgers and Cincinnati Reds—the hottest two teams in baseball and in pursuit of the National League West championship—open a key three-game series at sold-out Riverfront Stadium tonight.

● KTTV (11), 5 p.m.

All 51,726 seats have been sold for each game and the Reds are now selling "standing room" tickets.

Los Angeles, leading the Reds by 2½ games, must face Don "Dodger Killer" Gullett tonight. Gullett, a 23-year-old lefthander, has a 12-4 lifetime mark against the Dodgers, who will counter with Don Sutton.

Tonight's game is the first of six in 10 days between the two clubs. By the time the teams finish up at Los Angeles next weekend, a clear favorite for the division title should emerge.

The Reds spotted the Dodgers a hefty 10-game lead midway in the season but have been chipping away ever since.

A three game sweep here this weekend could give Cincinnati the division lead for the first time since April 6, when the season was just a couple of days old. But a Los Angeles sweep would leave the Reds 5 ½ games back.

"We're going to know a lot about how this is shaping up by Sunday evening," says Reds Manager Sparky Anderson, who has grown more confident as his team inched its way back the last two months. "We're going to win this thing. We have courage. My guys are never going to stop."

In his fifth season of heading Cincinnati, Anderson has now put his managerial reputation on the line. He's led the Reds to first place finishes three of the last four years but flatly says the talent he has this season is better than ever.

Walter Alston, a craftsman in his 21st straight season of managing the Dodgers, believes he has a steadier team than last year's version that gave way to the Reds in the final month.

Two off-season trades—picking up hard-working reliever Mike Marshall from Montreal and getting slugger Jimmy Wynn from Houston—already have paid huge dividends for Los Angeles.

The Dodgers, who have beaten the Reds nine of 12 times this year, bring an 85-51 record into the series—a sizzling .625 winning percentage.

The Reds are 83-54, a .606 mark that would easily put them in first place in any of the major league's three other divisions.

For Saturday afternoon's nationally-televised game — the fifth time in as many weeks the Reds have been featured on national TV—the Dodgers will send 16-game winner Andy Messersmith against Clay Kirby.

In the Sunday afternoon windup, the Reds' Jack Billingham—winningest pitcher in the National League—will try for his 19th victory against Doug Rau.

Reliever Jim Brewer came off the disabled list Thursday and joined Dodgers here.

It was the second time Brewer, 36, had been on the disabled list this year because of a back injury. He was first placed on the list July 14 and then again Aug. 15. He has been undergoing tests and medication at Centinela Valley Hospital.

Brewer, 4-3 this season with a 2.81 earned run average, has not pitched since July 14.

Broncos adjust offensive plans

By BILL LANGLEY
P-B Sports Editor

Cal Poly's new look football team will make its long awaited 1974 debut Saturday night at Fresno State but the new head coach, Andy Vinci, had to abandon his original offensive plans.

But Vinci isn't too concerned about it. Instead, he has gone back to the Multiple-set T offense which served him so well last year when he directed the University of San Diego into the NCAA Division III national playoffs.

The unexpected loss of All-California Collegiate Athletic Association end Joe Fabian two weeks ago forced Vinci to forget his plans for an unique Flip offense which would have used all three top receivers.

According to Vinci, the idea was to utilize Fabian plus Andy Sanchez and Ernie Yarbrough, the prize receivers from his San Diego team, at the same time. Part of the plan was for Fabian to play fullback as a receiver.

"I think that's a big reason why Fabian left us," Vinci explained. "He wasn't that excited about playing that fullback spot."

Fabian, contacted at his La Puente home, basically agreed with that sentiment.

"I told them I couldn't play under that system," he said. "I couldn't adjust to it."

Fabian, who played on the Bishop Amat teams with USC stars Pat Haden and John McKay, said he has dropped out of school for the fall quarter and isn't sure what his future plans are.

"I just don't know yet," he said. "I may return after a year or transfer to another school."

Fabian said he left Poly with no ill feelings. "They are going to have a good team," he added. "It just didn't suit my style of play."

Fabian was named to the All-CCAA club last year after catching 54 passes for five touchdowns and 1,042 yards to lead the conference.

"Sure, it hurt us," Vinci said about the loss of Fabian. "But we showed we are all right in gaining 600 offensive yards last week in the scrimmage against Arizona Western."

With Sanchez and Yarbrough, Poly is still in great shape with receivers for quarterback Jim Zorn. Yarbrough caught 67 passes for 1,102 yards and 10 touchdowns at San Diego while Sanchez grabbed 64 for 1,022 yards and six TDs.

Vinci is starting an experienced offensive unit against Fresno even though this will be their first game together.

Besides Sanchez and Yarbrough, Poly has one more standout from USD in tailback Rich Paulson. The other starter in the backfield is returnee John Sedia at fullback.

Three junior college transfers will be on the offensive line. Randy Taylor (6-1, 230) of Palomar and Jack Murry (6-0, 218) of Golden West will open at the tackle spots while Al Clegg (6-1 and 230) of Mt. San Antonio is one of the starting guards.

The other offensive starters are back from last year's Poly team. They are center Steve Celotto (6-2, 240), a converted tackle, guard Vernon Smith (6-1, 220) and tight end Ron Tatum (6-1, 198).

Vinci is starting eight JC transfers on defense. They are: ends Terry Young (5-10, 195) of Golden West and Rob Parades (6-1, 190) of Rio Hondo; tackle Leon Hooker (6-4, 240) of Citrus; nose guard Bryan Kerns (6-1, 205) of Golden West; linebackers Jim Castanon (6-1, 199) of Fresno and Doug Gerdwagen (6-2, 220) of West Valley; cornerback Harold Eggers (5-10, 170) of Cypress; and safety Ron Stewart (6-0, 185) of College of the Canyons. Returning from last year are tackle Gary Bockman (6-2, 200), cornerback Paul Russell (5-10, 175) and safety Don Hariston (6-5, 205).

Another JC product, Alister Crumlish of Pierce will be handling the kicking duties.

UCLA battles Vols, tradition in Knoxville

By United Press International

Somebody at UCLA should have picked up a telephone last spring and called Joe Paterno. He could have told them what a mistake they were making.

The Bruins originally were scheduled to open the football season at home against Tennessee. But when ABC chose to make that contest on Saturday the first nationally-televised game of the season, the two schools decided to move it East to Knoxville to avoid playing in the brutal afternoon heat of Los Angeles.

Paterno, who doesn't make many mistakes, made the same one a couple of years ago, and television wasn't even involved in it.

After his Penn State team was thumped 31-11 at Knoxville in the last game of the 1971 season—the Lions only defeat— another game was scheduled with Tennessee to open '72.

And somehow, Tennessee quick-talked some folks at Penn State into playing the second game at Knoxville, too.

Tennessee also won that one. That was the last regular season game lost by Penn State.

The Vols, in fact, play so good at Knoxville they have lost only three home games in the last seven seasons.

So Knoxville doesn't figure to be a comfortable place for Dick Vermeil to start his career as UCLA's new head coach, even though the Bruins are favored. "I'm just happy the game is being played in Knoxville instead of Los Angeles as originally scheduled," Tennessee Coach Bill Battle crowed, secure in the knowledge he had another fast one.

Among the other new coaches making their debut on Saturday's season-opening schedule are Frank Maloney, who took over at Syracuse following the retirement of Ben Schwartzwalder, a 25-year institution at the upstate New York school.

The Orangemen, who had one of the worst seasons in their history last year (2-9), host Oregon State.

Villanova is at Richmond and North Carolina State at Wake Forest in afternoon games, while night games include Houston at Arizona State, Memphis State at Louisville, Mississippi at Tulane and Tampa at Chattanooga.

Chris has to prove herself

FOREST HILLS, N. Y. (UPI) — Chris Evert has to prove herself today in the U.S. Open Tennis Championship semifinal.

Yes, she is the Wimbledon queen.

Yes, she has beaten Evonne Goolagong seven of the 11 times she has faced the graceful and exciting part-aborigine Australian.

But.

This is the fourth time, the fourth, that Chris has walked onto the court in the Forest Hills semifinals. Her three other appearances ended in defeat.

This is the fourth time she will meet Miss Goolagong on grass, and she has yet to beat Evonne on the surface, losing to her the third time in the Australian Open final in January—6-0 in the third set.

There is a world of difference in Chris' play today from the brand she displayed in 1971 when, at age 16, she built her parapet on the baseline and went to the semis to the adulation of the crowd. Playing every match in the stadium, serving virtually by a 1-2-3 count, she primly walked the tight rope, until Billie Jean King slaughtered her.

In 1972, Miss Evert was stopped cold by Australia's Kerry Melville, and last year the regal Margaret Court, with her son Danny babbling just outside the stadium, trimmed her 7-5, 2-6, 6-2.

But now Chris has her whole game together. She will be seeking her 56th consecutive match victory and 11th straight tournament triumph. She no longer has a mechanical serve, her ground strokes are better than ever, and she has even been known to go to the net, an area she once shrinked from approaching, fearing it might be crawling with worms.

But.

She won Italy, France and Wimbledon. Neither Billie Jean nor Evonne were in the Italian and French fields, while at Wimbledon, BJ was ambushed by Olga Morozova and Evonne lost to Miss Melville. Chris thereupon joined fiance Jimmy Connors on the champions' list by breezing past the Russian girl in the final, 6-0, 6-4.

Miss Goolagong has swept through her four opponents here, not dropping a set. She wants this title badly to offset the bitter taste of being denied entry in France and playing poorly at Wimbledon.

Yet if Evonne wants this title badly, Billie Jean is aching for it. Ms. King faces Julie Heldman in the other semi today, and she has a score to settle.

A year ago, in blazing heat, Julie pulled the book on her. On a change-over of courts, Billie could hardly get to her feet. Miss Heldman asked the umpire if her opponent was defaulting.

"If you want it that badly," Billie gasped to Julie, "you can have it."

Billie Jean has a long memory.

Rooting for Chris today will be Connors, who kept their hopes for a totally unprecedented sweep of Wimbledon and Forest Hills titles alive by whipping Russia's Alex Metreveli in four sets on Thursday.

Watching will be November's other bridgroom, Stan Smith, who went out against the latest of the new brash Americans, 22-year-old Roscoe Tanner.

Resting up will be Ken Rosewall, the 39-year-old master who gave a four set, how-to-come-from-behind lesson to 20-year-old Vijay Amritraj, and defending men's champion John Newcombe, who escaped from Arthur Ashe in a scary five set thriller.

Angels can't beat ailing Sox hurler

ANAHEIM (UPI) — Even being one pitch short, righthander Bart Johnson of the Chicago White Sox had enough to combine with Terry Forster in pitching a five-hit 1-0 shutout over the California Angels.

"I cut my thumb on my luggage when we got to town," said the 24-year-old Johnson, who only allowed two infield singles Thursday night until getting into trouble in the eighth. "I couldn't throw a curve ball. I had to depend on my fastball and slider."

Those two pitches were enough though, as Forster came in with one-out in the eighth to strike out Morris Nettles and get Bobby Valentine to ground out. Forster earned his 20th save in preserving the victory for Johnson.

Ken Henderson doubled in the only run of the game in the sixth inning off California rookie Ed Figueroa, who gave up just four hits in going the distance in a losing effort. Jorge Orta scored from first after a bloop single.

"Eddie pitched a hell of a good game," California Manager Dick Williams said. "That's his second good one in a row. He's pitched well overall. We had our shot with runners at first and third and one out in the eighth inning but we didn't take advantage of the opportunity. We're not getting knocked out of the box. We're just not getting that timely hit. I hate to get a well pitched game and lose."

Figueroa is 2-7, while Johnson is 7-3.

Denny Doyle and pinch-hitter Charlie Sands singled to put runners at the corners in the eighth but Forster proved too much for the Angels.

Wilbur Wood goes for his 21st win tonight as he faces the Angels' Frank Tanana, 9-17. Wood is 20-16.

The Angels signed veteran righthanded pitcher Orlando Pena, released by the St. Louis Cardinals, as a free agent Thursday and made three other roster changes.

Lakers slate Russell signing

INGLEWOOD — The Lakers have scheduled a press conference at noon today to announce the signing of former Golden State Warrior forward Cazzie Russell, who became a free agent Sunday.

The former University of Michigan All-American has averaged 15 points a game in his eight-year NBA career.

A Laker spokesman said no agreement has been made with the Warriors yet for compensation. There is speculation Golden State may receive the NBA rights for former Laker Wilt Chamberlain.

Fighters pass physical exams

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Venezuela's Alfredo Marcano and Bobby Chacon of Sylmar, Calif., who meet for the World Boxing Council featherweight title, both passed pre-fight physicals Thursday and in a preliminary weigh-in were at or near the 126-pound limit.

Marcano, a former junior lightweight champion, weighed 126 ½ pounds and Chacon was 126, state athletic commission doctor Bernhart Schwartz said. Both fighters, however, said they plan to check in at 125 for the official weigh-in Saturday.

Marcano is favored in the scheduled 15-round bout at the Olympic Auditorium Saturday night to fill the vacant WBC featherweight championship.

Winless 49ers test 4-1 Rams

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The Los Angeles Rams carry a 4-1 record and some impressive statistics into their final preseason game of the year Sunday against the winless San Francisco 49ers at Candlestick Park.

Through the 1974 pre-season, the Rams have gained 1,085 yards on the ground while allowing their opponents only 320 yards by the same route.

Los Angeles holds a 16-6 edge in its pre-season series with the 49ers but this year's meeting will be the first time San Francisco has gotten to host the clash.

The 49ers were edged 20-19 by the Oakland Raiders this week to drop their record to 0-5.

Heisman Trophy winner John Cappelletti leads the Los Angeles rushing corps with 245 yards while Rob Scribner has four touchdowns on the ground and Tony Baker has three. Scribner also has 239 yards rushing and Cullen Bryant has 217.

TV takes control quickly

ATLANTA (UPI) — Television wasted no time taking over control of college football for this fall.

And, what television wants, television gets.

Saturday's UCLA-Tennessee game is one good example. Monday night's Notre Dame-Georgia Tech game is another.

Tennessee originally was scheduled to play UCLA in Los Angeles the night of Sept. 14. Television not only changed the date and the time (now 4:20 p.m. EDT), but also the site. The game was moved more than 2,500 miles to Knoxville, Tenn.

The reasoning was purely commercial.

Tennessee Coach Bill Battle made a valiant effort to explain the triple-switch on a more aesthetic plane. But, he wound up lamely admitting that television dictated the changes.

Georgia Tech, caught in a financial squeeze partially of its own doing, needs all the outside help it can get these days. So the Yellow Jackets were more than ready when the Monday night spot was proposed.

Notre Dame was a bit reluctant at first, but gave in. That game was advanced not a week but two full months. It had been set for the afternoon of Nov. 9. At least, the site (Atlanta) was unchanged.

The Tennessee-UCLA game should be a good one. The Vols hold a 3-1 edge in that series, having won three straight from the Bruins since losing their first meeting, 20-16 but UCLA boasted the most productive running game in the country last fall.

The game marks the debut of Dick Vermell who took over as head coach when Pepper Rodgers switched to Georgia Tech.

Rodgers gives the Saturday-Monday games continuity. Viewers get a chance to see the team he left on Saturday; then see what he has done with his wishbone two days later.

Pepper Rodgers fans may be a bit disappointed. Not only will Georgia Tech be running that wishbone against one of the great college defenses, the Jackets also will be running it without Danny Myers, the man Rodgers picked to be his quarterback.

When Rodgers installed the wishbone at Tech, he switched Myers from defense. But Myers was hurt in a scrimmage last week and Rudy Allen will be the Monday night quarterback.

It is expected that the best quarterback viewers will see in these two games will be Condredge Holloway of Tennessee.

Holloway is the South's leading candidate for the Heisman Trophy, a super athlete who probably will play professional baseball after he graduates next June.

Condredge Holloway is a scrambler who often turns busted plays into big plays. Saturday will be the first time he's run the veer-T in competition.

Steelers whip Cowboys, 41-15

Thomas returns tonight

By United Press International

This could be a very imteresting night for Duane Thomas.

Thomas, the moody running back who's been in and out of trouble with several clubs since starring for Dallas as a rookie four years ago, was put on waivers last week by Washington Coach George Allen after he cursed and shoved a Redskin assistant coach, Charley Waller.

No National Football League club would take a chance with the temperamental Thomas but he finally apologized to Allen, Waller and the club, and asked for reinstatement.

Allen took him back and tonight he makes his first appearance in Washington since the incident when the Redskins take on the Baltimore Colts in the final pre-season game for both clubs.

The Redskins have Larry Brown, one of the finest runners in the league, but their running attack has been flat ever since Charley Harraway jumped to Birmingham of the rival World Football League after last season. Thomas was expected to pick up the blocking slack left by Harraway's departure.

The Redskins have won only one of five pre-season games and hardly look ready to battle for a playoff spot in the National Conference East. Baltimore, on the other hand, isn't entertaining any playoff hopes. The Colts are still in the rebuilding stage and continue to shuffle players in and out of camp. They have won one of four exhibitions.

In other action tonight, the New York Giants are at Buffalo, St. Louis is at Kansas City and Cincinnati meets Green Bay at Milwaukee.

The New York Jets meet Oakland Saturday afternoon in Berkeley, Calif., and Saturday night, Cleveland is at Detroit, New Orleans at Houston, Miami at Chicago and San Diego at Minnesota. On Sunday, Los Angeles is at San Francisco, Philadelphia at New England and Atlanta at Denver, to wrap up pre-season play.

In Thursday night's only game, the Pittsburgh Steelers completed their first perfect pre-season in more than 40 years in the NFL by crushing the Dallas Cowboys 41-15.

Joe Gilliam threw two touchdown passes in the first half and Terry Bradshaw and Terry Hanratty threw one each in the second to lift the Steelers to their sixth straight victory. Gilliam's performance earned him the No. 1 quarterback slot with Pittsburgh after being third string last season.

"It looks like we are going to have to go with Joe Gilliam," Steeler Coach Chuck Noll said after he hit 10-of-18 passes for 187 yards and completely baffled the Cowboy defense.

"We played an awfully good ball game," Noll said. "There is no doubt about it. This is a very nice way to go into the season. I'm not displeased with anybody."

The same couldn't be said for Cowboy Coach Tom Landry.

"When you stand flat-footed like we did tonight," Landry said, "you can't expect to win football games. We got whipped real good. We haven't looked that bad in preseason in some time. Pittsburgh is a good football team and they are ready for the season."

Gilliam threw a 56-yard TD pass to Ron Shanklin on the first offensive series and then hit rookie sensation John Stallworth with a 31-yarder. Bradshaw threw 20 yards to Larry Brown for a score and Hanratty threw 30 yards to Dave Davis.

N.C. stadium lease makes move likely

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — Upton Bell has made arrangements to lease Memorial Stadium but said Thursday it will be next week before he'll know if there will be a professional football team to play here.

"The big way has been cleared for Charlotte to have a professional football team," said Bell, following a meeting with the Charlotte Park and Recreation Commission.

Bell, former general manager of the New England Patriots of the National Football League, has franchise rights for a World Football League team in North Carolina and is expected to move the Detroit Wheels to Charlotte.

Although details of the agreement to lease Memorial Stadium were not disclosed, Bell said the commission "treated me very, very well."

The 24,000 seat facility has been tentatively leased for the Wheels' final four home games Oct. 2, Oct. 16, Nov. 6 and Nov. 13.

Bell said it will be next week before he will have a final decision on purchasing the financially-troubled Wheels.

"I have to get back to the stadium people by Sept. 20 to let them know whether I will bring a team here this year or next year or whatever," said Bell.

Asked if the lease agreement meant that he would definitely be bringing a team to Charlotte, Bell said, "It's probable.

"Things look very good. I'm going to spend the next three or four days talking to potential investors in North and South Carolina."

The Wheels still are winless after nine games and attendance has averaged less than 15,000 per game at Ypsilanti, Mich., where their games are played:

Bell previously had asked to rent Memorial Stadium for a flat rate per game instead of the standard 12 per cent of the game. He had also sought concession and parking rights and permission to sell beer at WFL games to provide additional income.

He said, however, that Memorial Stadium has to be a "short time proposition" for a professional football team.

"We can't make any money the next couple of years in there," he said. "Of course, we are hoping that Charlotte will build a new one. That's what we are waiting for."

A committee of the Chamber of Commerce is studying the feasibility of constructing a larger stadium here and also is investigating the best method of financiing such a structure.

Sports news in brief

COLUMBUS, Ga. (UPI) — PGA tour rookie Lyn Lott and Jim Ferriell, two longshots who are not among the top 100 moneywinners this year, held a one-stroke lead over a bunched up field today going into the second round of the Southern Open.

Lott, a former University of Georgia golfer who never led a PGA tournament round before, and Ferriell, a 10-year veteran, shot three-under-par 67s Thursday despite showers which peppered the Green Island course most of the day.

PROVO, Utah (UPI) — Terry Malan of Sandy, Utah, shot a five-under-par 67 Thursday to win the Rocky Mountain Professional Golfers Association title by one stroke. Malan earned $900 and a spot in the field for the 1975 PGA Championship.

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (UPI) — Gary Rutledge, Alabama's first-string quarterback will miss at least half of the 1974 season, it was disclosed Thursday.

Rutledge, a senior, fell during a scrimmage Wednesday and suffered a separation of his right shoulder that was to be corrected by surgery Thursday.

Team officials said juniors Richard Todd, 6-2 and 209, and Robert Fraley, 6-1 and 189, would serve as the team's No. 1 and No. 2 quarterbacks respectively during Rutledge's absence.

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — The San Diego Chargers traded tackle Dave Costa to the Buffalo Bills Thursday for a draft choice and sent another draft pick to the Green Bay Packers for veteran defensive tackle Bob Brown.

BUFFALO, N.Y. (UPI) — The Buffalo Bills Thursday traded rookie running back Carlester Crumpler, their No. 4 draft choice this year, to the Washington Redskins for undisclosed draft choices. The Bills also gave defensive tackle Steve Chomyszak his unconditional release and waived rookie quarterback Greg Hare.

DENVER (UPI) — The Denver Broncos are loading up on World Football League talent.

The latest acquisition is wide receiver Otto Stowe, who was kicked out of the Dallas Cowboys training camp last month for refusing to practice.

Stowe, 6-2, 188, from Iowa State, has signed to play with the WFL Jacksonville Sharks in 1975. The Broncos traded an undisclosed draft choice to Dallas for his services this year.

Stowe is the third player who has signed a future contract with the WFL to be picked up by Denver. The Broncos previously acquired NFL defectors Tom Douglas, an offensive tackle from Baltimer, and wide receiver Al Barnes from the Detroit Lions.

BEREA, Ohio (UPI) — The Cleveland Browns traded defensive end Joe Jones, a starter with them last season, to the Philadelphia Eagles Thursday for veteran wide receiver Ben Hawkins.

INDIANAPOLIS, Indiana (UPI) — The 23rd annual Hoosier Hundred, the richest dirt track auto race of them all, will be run Saturday with Mario Andretti, A.J. Foyt and Al Unser topping the field.

A purse of about $75,000 has been posted and a number of standout records will be in jeopardy, among them Unser's four-year monopoly of the race over the one-mile State Fairgrounds track.

Foy, three-time Indianapolis "500" champion, has been the winner six times but not since 1969.

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Michael, "Campy" Russell, Cleveland's No. 1 draft choice, signed a National Basketball Association contract with the Cavaliers Thursday night, ending sporadic negotiations begun shortly after he was drafted in May.

The 6-foot-8, 215-pound forward from Michigan signed as a hardship case. Terms of the contract were not announced.

Last year as a junior, Russell led Michigan to the Big 10 championship, averaging 23.7 points per game, and was selected as the league's Most Valuable Player.

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The NBA Philadelphia 76ers Thursday signed Bob Rule, a 6-foot-9 center who played 26 games for the Cleveland Cavaliers last season, and rookie Harvey Catchings of Hardin-Simmons.

NEW YORK (UPI) — George Steinbrenner III, owner of the New York Yankees, has agreed to withdraw completely from all activities of the club pending a final decision on his involvement in making illegal campaign contributions, it was announced Friday by Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

Stars face Blazers for Eastern lead

By United Press International

It will be strength against strength tonight—if the players have any left after playing Monday night—to determine first place in the World Footballs League Eastern Division.

The New York Stars own the best rushing attack in the WFL and send it against the Florida Blazers, who have allowed only 119 points this season, the lowest figure in the league.

Both clubs are 6-3 but Florida has lost two of its last three games while New York has won six of its last seven.

Bob Gladieux is New York's top runner and comes off a 161-yard effort against Philadelphia Monday night. George Sauer and Al Young, New York's top receivers, both are out with injuries but rookie Kreg Kapitan has been impressive as a substitute.

Bob Davis runs the Florida attack and one of his key receivers has been tight end Greg Latta. Tommy Reamon is the top rusher.

In other WFL action tonight, the Hawaiians are at Portland, Houston at Memphis and Southern California at Detroit in the only games scheduled. Chicago is at Birmingham Saturday.

In Thursday night's national television game, the Jacksonville Sharks beat the Philadelphia Bell 34-30.

"There ain't but one king in Jacksonville and that's me," yelled Reggie Oliver after he led the Sharks over Philadelphia and Bell quarterback King Corcoran. "We aint giving no slack from now on—we're taking it on in."

Oliver completed 14-of-24 passes for 321 yards and two touchdowns, including a 63-yard strike to tight end Dennis Hughes in the second quarter. Corcoran hit only 13-for-30 for 174 yards.

The Bell turned two blocked field goal attempts into touchdowns to keep the game close.

Sports parade

NEW YORK (UPI) — One hot, muggy evening in the 40's, Bob Feller, or "Rapid Robert" as everybody called him then, fired a baseball through a speed testing device at 98.6 miles per hour and until now nobody ever has been clocked as fast.

That record is going down the drain at Anaheim, Calif., Saturday night.

Bob Feller says he's sure of it.

He's convinced Nolan Ryan is going to better 98.6.

On the face of it, that sounds like a prediction. On closer inspection, it turns out to be something of an accusation by the former Cleveland Indians' fireballer.

This is the way the whole thing evolved:

Feller's 98.6 clocking for propelling a baseball has stood relatively unchallenged for 28 years. In his day, nobody threw any harder than he did.

Today, nobody throws harder than Nolan Ryan, the California Angels' right-handed terrifier who only a few nights ago became the first pitcher in modern baseball history to strike out 300 batters three straight seasons.

An idea hit George Lederer, the Angels' imaginative PR director. Why not come up with some kind of device to determine whether Ryan throws the ball harder than Feller did? Why not hold a contest and award prizes to those fans who come closest to guessing at what speed Ryan delivers?

Why not, indeed?

Accordingly, a call was made to the Rockwell International Corporation which said, yes, it could provide an infra-red radar device to gauge Ryan's actual speed.

The date was set for this Saturday night when the Angels meet the Chicago White Sox at home. Fans were invited to guess how fast Ryan would throw the ball. He'd be clocked warming up and later pitching in the ball game. The machine would time Ryan as the ball passed through an electronic "field."

There was to have been a big element of suspense attached to all this. Who's faster, Feller or Ryan? Bob Feller says there's really no suspense to Saturday night's spectacle at all.

"I understand someone in the Angels' organization already knows the outcome," Feller says, "and that they timed his (Ryan's) ball faster than mine. This company did the clocking a couple of weeks ago. Figure it out for yourself—the Angels say they don't know how this is going to come out Saturday night, but if they really didn't, if there was any doubt in their minds at all, would they bother staging a promotion just to announce Ryan wasn't clocked as fast as I was?"

Dalton denies knowledge

There's considerable logic there, but Harry Dalton, the Angels' Executive Vice President and General Manager, insists neither he nor anyone else in the organization actually knows anything about Ryan being clocked faster than Feller.

"The Rockwell people know, but we don't," says Dalton. "They came out a couple of weeks ago when we were playing Detroit and they clocked (Mickey) Lolich in 90.1, I believe. I guess they clocked Ryan also, but they never said anything to us about it. They never gave any figures. I understand a few of the Rockwell officials are aware of Ryan's actual clocking, but they've been sworn to secrecy. I can assure you none of us with the ball club know it."

So there it stands.

If I had to guess, I'd have to say Ryan will be clocked faster than Feller. I never hit against either one, but I've seen both, and if Mickey Lolich can throw a ball at 90.1 miles per hour, then I'd have to say Nolan Ryan would be up around 100 MPH or slightly better.

Feller makes one good point.

He says when he was clocked on Aug. 16, 1946 in Griffith Stadium, Washington, he had to pitch through a triangle approximately the size of home plate while Ryan will not be restricted in any such way. Feller says he had to control and aim the ball, while Ryan will be throwing through a "free field," so to speak.

"I've often said that years ago I would've liked to have been clocked throwing the ball 'wide open' without having to control my pitches," Feller says. "I remember a Cleveland newspaper used to have one of these portable speed testing devices around the ballpark and one day a sandlotter was clocked throwing the ball 139 miles per hour.

"Rocky Colavito, who had one of the best arms I ever saw, also was up around there. Me? Somewhere around 120-130. I didn't think it was accurate. Besides, speed alone doesn't make a pitcher."

In Feller's opinion, Sandy Koufax had the best live fast ball he ever saw.

He doesn't come right out and say so, but you can sense Feller feels he threw a baseball as fast as anybody, if not faster. In his heart, I'm sure, he feels he threw harder than Ryan.

There is, according to Feller, one way he knows of to settle the question whether he was faster than Ryan.

"Go to the players, managers and coaches around today who hit against me," he says. "Ask them who was the fastest."

The players? How can they judge? None of them around today ever his against Feller.

Don Wilson understands

By MILTON RICHMAN
UPI Sports Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Don Wilson was sitting in the trainer's room, saying nothing and having himself a beer.

What could he really say after what had happened?

He didn't feel like answering a lot of questions, which he was sure he was going to be hit with, nor did he feel like jumping into the shower, getting dressed and going home. Not right now, anyway.

So Don Wilson pulled open a can of beer Wednesday night and sat in the trainer's room, which is off-limits to the media and the first place ballplayers head when they don't feel like talking to anybody.

The ball game was over now.

Cincinnati had just beat Houston 2-1 in the Astrodome. Don Wilson sat there thinking about the events of the past two hours, thinking about how he might've had the third no-hitter of his career by now....might've, but that's all.

He had been working on it, needing only three more outs, but with the Astros trailing in the bottom of the eighth, he had been pulled for a pinch-hitter by manager Preston Gomez.

DON WILSON
... tough loss

The Houston players were trooping back into the clubhouse now. Some walked into the trainer's room where they saw Wilson.

"Tough luck," said one.

"Maybe he should've left you in," offered another.

Don Wilson nodded his appreciation. He knew what they were trying to do. They were trying to make him feel better.

Preston Gomez also came over.

The Houston manager shook his hand.

"Great game," Gomez said to him. "I'm glad you understand I had to do it like that."

"Well, yeah," replied Wilson. "I understand winning the ball game was the most important thing at the time."

This was the second time Gomez had found himself in this kind of situation. He was managing San Diego in 1970 when one of his pitchers, Clay Kirby, had a no-hitter through eight innings in a game with the Mets, but was behind, 1-0. Gomez used a pinch-hitter and was severely criticized by some people, most of whom wouldn't know second base from second down.

Kirby, 22 at the time, was deeply disappointed at missing his no-hitter.

"I assure you, if the occasion ever arose again, with you pitching or anybody else, I would do the same thing," Gomez told him. "The important thing with me, with you, with anybody, should be winning the game."

Kirby, now with the Reds, was in the dugout across the field while Wilson was trying for his third no-hitter Wednesday night in Houston.

"Whadd'ya think he'll do," one of the Reds on the bench asked him as the time drew near for Gomez to decide whether to let Wilson hit or not.

"There's no question at all what he'll do," Kirby replied. "He's gonna hit for him. I know because he told me he'd do that, and one thing about Gomez, he always does what he says he will."

Gomez did what he felt he had to do to try to win. He sent up Tommy Helms to bat for Wilson, and the crowd booed. They booed even louder when Helms rolled out.

In his office after the ball game, Gomez' phone started ringing.

The first call was long distance from a man Gomez didn't even know.

"I've never met you and probably never will," said the caller, "but I just wanted to let you know that by doing what you did tonight, you proved we still have honest people in sports."

Wilson remained in the trainer's room nearly an hour-and-a-half, and b ythe time he left the ballpark, it was midnight. When he got home, his wife, Bernice was angry.

"He should've let you stay in," she said.

"Well, things happen," Wilson answered. "It may turn out to be the best thing that ever happened. Say I would've pitched another no-hitter. There would've been a lot of publicity, a lot of excitement, a lot of everything. Who knows, you might've gotten so upset with me, we might've gotten a divorce in the morning."

Don Wilson was kidding, of course.

He's completely serious, though, when he says this of Preston Gomez:

"If I was managing and the same situation came up, I'd probably do the same thing he did. As a player, I consider myself fortunate playing for him. I like him. He's consistent, and you can talk to him. You go in, tell him how you feel, exactly what's on your mind, and he doesn't hold it against you. He's all right."

The Astros had an off day Thursday but Gomez showed up at the ballpark, anyway, the same way he does every day because he loves his work.

"You showed me something," Spec Richardson, the Astros' general manager, said to him.

"What did I show you?" Gomez asked his boss.

"That you wanna win, no matter what," was the reply.

Firestone CC: a monster of a course even for the host pro

AKRON, Ohio (UPI) — Bobby Nichols slipped in through the back door as an alternate in this weekend's 13th annual World Series of Golf, but he doesn't expect any breaks from the rugged Firestone Country Club course, site of the tourney, even though he is head pro of the 7,180-yard layout.

"It's one of the few courses that I have never felt comfortable playing," admitted Nichols, 38, who qualified as first alternate by winning the Canadian Open and became eligible for the World Series when Gary Player won two of the major tournaments this season.

"There is not an easy or letup hole out there, but I enjoy playing this type of a course," the host pro, whose only previous appearance in the four-way scramble for the $50,000 top prize was in 1964, added.

Player, winner of this year's Masters and British Open titles, Lee Trevino, winner of the PGA, and Hale Irwin, U. S. Open champion, make up the rest of the World Series eligibles.

Player has some ideas of his own about what it takes to master the huge, heavily sandtrapped Firestone monster.

"I always spend a little bit more time with my irons there because there are so many holes that you need a two or three iron to," said the 37-year-old South African veteran.

"Another thing is you've got to have your bunker play in good shape and I think that's one of the reasons I've done well at that course.

Player is considered an excellent sand player.

Trevino, 34, earned another shot at the World Series title by edging one of the most regular visitors to the tournament — Jack Nicklaus —by one stroke for the PGA championship.

"Super Mex," however, has never finished better than in a tie for second in three previous World Series events and readily admits the long Firestone layout is not suited to his game.

The only rookie in World Series competition is the 29-year-old Irwin, but he thinks his inexperience could work to his advantage.

"I think the first time in you'll be trying a little harder," said the former Colorado football player. "Im kind of priming myself for it. I have played Firestone pretty well in the past, and all of us have played the course enough to know what it will take."

Second place money in the World Series is worth $15,000, with $7,500 going for third place and $5,000 for fourth.

This year's field has no repeaters from last year's which included winner Tom Weiskopf, Nicklaus, Johnny Miller and Tommy Aaron.

The four contestants will play an official practice round Friday, with the 36-hole event scheduled for Saturday and Sunday. NBC will televise the final six holes both days with coverage scheduled from 5 to 6:30 p.m. EDT.

Shoemaker tries for fourth victory

DEL MAR, Calif. (UPI) — Jockey Bill Shoemaker bids for his fourth added-money victory in a row Saturday when he climbs aboard Donna B. Quick in the $20,000 added Rancho Bernardo Handicap at Del Mar.

Shoemaker, 43, who has more wins than any other rider ever, has scored in his last three stakes races at the track. He was also aboard the winner in Thursday's $12,000 allowance feature.

The Rancho Bernardo for fillies and mares 3-years-old and up has attracted a field of 10. The third running of the race is set for six furlongs.

The field also includes high-weighted Mismoyola, Lt.'s Joy, Fleet Peach, Dear Intent, Impressive Style, Izanami, Dangerous Bluff and Wingo Belle.

Shoemaker took the favored Polka Dot Veil to a 2 ½ lengths triumph in the feature Thursday for a $5.20 tally. Mercy Dee was second and Sweet Ramblin Rose was third in the 1 1-16 mile race.

Stablemates High Protein and Osage River were both entered in today's $14,000 allowance feature for 3-year-olds and up as jockeys Jorge Tejeira and Alvaro Pineda resume their battle for the riding championship of the meeting.

Tejeira, who trails Pineda by a single tally after leading most of the meeting, was named to both the Bobby Frankel-trained entries.

Pineda will be aboard New Zealand-bred Gold Braid 2nd.

Others entered were El Penon, In Rhythm, Specialmente and Owenboliska.

The 35th running of the $100,000 Del Mar Invitational Handicap at 11 furlongs is to be run Sunday with a possible field of as many as 12, the largest in recent years for the event.

Brooks scores kayo

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Monroe Brooks of Los Angeles, the California lightweight and junior welterweight champion, stopped Mexico's Ruben Vasquez in the third round of their scheduled 10-round lightweight bout Thursday night at the Olympic Auditorium.

Brooks, 138 ½, had Vasquez, 140, pinned against the ropes and helpless with a barrage of combinations to the head and body when referee Chuck Hassett ruled the Mexicali fighter was in no condition to continue and awarded the KO to Brooks with 20 seconds left in the round.

The victory improved Brooks' record to 24-1 and 16 KOs. Brooks, the No. 10 rated lightweight, stopped Vasquez on cuts in eight rounds in Mexicali earlier this year.

Art Williams goes to Q's

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Veteran guard Art "Hambone" Williams, released Wednesday by Boston of the National Basketball Association, signed with the American Basketball Association San Diego Conquistadors Thursday.

Williams, 35, was to play out his option with the Celtics this season before joining San Diego, but the release made it unnecessary for him to play out his option.

"Art has agreed to our terms and the way has been cleared with the National Basketball Association," Q's General Manager Alex Groza said.

Williams joined the NBA at the relatively old age of 28 when the San Diego Rockets were formed. The San Diego native had played college ball at Cal Poly of Pomona.

The 6-foot-1, 180-pounder is best known for his passing.

Groza noted Williams played with Q's high-scoring guard Bo Lamar in a summer league the past few months and the two should team well together in the backcourt.

Slow pitch teams vie in tourney at Welch Park

Ralph Welch Park will be the site of the Southern California Municipal Athletic Federation (SCMAF) Major Division Slo-Pitch softball finals Saturday and Sunday.

Tournament Director Phil LaPierre says that eight of the top teams in the state and probably the country will vie for the SCMAF title with two games slated for Saturday at 12 noon and two more at 2 p.m. The winners of those games will square off at 4 p.m.

The finals will be played Sunday at 3 p.m.

Of the eight teams, seven are SCMAF league champions with the eighth entry a league runnerup.

At noon on one diamond, the Inland Valley Association winners tangle with the Southeast Association titlists. The other 12 o'clock game will pit Rocco's Roadrunners, a Pomona entry and runnerup in the San Gabriel Valley Association, against the Saddleback Sports of the Orange County Association.

Rocco's is led by Frank Wilson, Larry Hornaday, Norm Rush and Steve Allen.

At 2 p.m. on one diamond, the Itchy Foot Sandwich Shop (SGV) takes on the San Diego County Association winners. While the other game will feature Willie's Sporting Goods (Channel Cities Association) and Gas Rhondo, of the Bay Area Association.

There is no admission charge for the single elimination tourney.

Red Sox slump continues

By United Press International

The pennant fever which the Boston Red Sox have had since climbing into first place July 14 seems to have weakened them for the home stretch and the New York Yankees are deliriously happy.

The slumping Red Sox' seventh straight loss, a 4-3 setback Thursday night by the Milwaukee Brewers, enabled the idle Yankees to slip into first place for the first time since May 11.

Boston's tailspin, coupled with the Yankees' hottest streak of the year and the quiet resurgence of the Baltimore Orioles, has turned the previously humdrum American League East into a three-way dogfight that will be decided over the last three weeks of the season.

"Its just a team batting slump. There's nothing I can do," said Red Sox Manager Darrell Johnson. "I can't go out there and hit for them. They're trying too hard. Everyone has been trying to hit the ball out of the park."

The Sox, who led the AL East by seven games two weeks ago, were shot down by three Brewer homers to fall a half game behind the Yankees. Baltimore, which did not play Thursday, remains two games out.

Gorman Thomas, playing in his first game since being recalled from Sacramento of the Pacific Coast League, belted a homer with a man on in the ninth inning to bring the Brewers from behind. Milwaukee also got solo homers from Mike Hegan and Pedro Garcia, both in the seventh inning.

Yet Johnson found reason for optimism in the latest loss, because his team scored two runs—the first in 35 innings.

"At least we had some people on the sacks. It was good to see them out on the bases," said Johnson, who watched three of his runners thrown out at the plate.

Meanwhile, in the National League, the next 10 days should determine which of the two winningest teams in baseball— the Reds and the Dodgers—will win the Western title.

The Dodgers, leading the Reds by 2 ½ games, open a three-game set tonight in Cincinnati. A sweep of the weekend series could give Cincinnati the division lead for the first time since April 6 while a Los Angeles sweep would leave the Reds 5 ½ games back.

In the only other American League games, Minnesota dumped Kansas City 4-1, Oakland blanked Texas 3-0 and Chicago shut out California 1-0. Philadelphia shaded Chicago 6-5 in 11 innings in the only NL game..

Twins 4, Royals 1

Steve Busby's bases-loaded throwing error on a pickoff move to third base allowed two runs to score, helping the Twins over the Royals. Vic Albury had a six-hitter for Minnesota.

The loss was the Royals' eighth straight, and Busby, 19-13, missed his third attempt at his 20th victory. Albury, 6-8, allowed only one hit after the fourth inning.

A's 3, Rangers 0

Jim "Catfish" Hunter won his 22nd game, highest in the majors and a career high for him, as he stopped the Rangers on four singles for an A's win. Hunter now has four consecutive 20-game years. It was his fifth shutout and 18th complete game in 35 starts and boosted Oakland's lead in the AL West to 8 ½ games. The veteran Oakland right-hander has won 14 of his last 16 decisions and is a prime candidate for his first Cy Young Award.

Phils 6, Cubs 5

Bob Boone's bases-loaded single with one out in the 11th inning scored Willie Montanez and Mike Anderson to give the Phillies a win over the Cubs, breaking a seven-game Philadelphia losing streak in extra-inning games dating to April 14.

The victory broke a three-game losing streak for the Phils and extended the Cubs' losing streak to four games.

Meisterlin holds lead

Debbie Meisterlin faltered with a four over par 76 Thursday but held onto a one-stroke lead over defending champion Pam Tynar after the second round of the Southern California Women's Amateur golf championship at Pomona National Golf Club in Walnut.

Miss Meisterlin, of Buena Park, had a 36-hole total of 146. Miss Tynar, of Fullerton, shot an even par 72 and had a 147 total.

Marge Callahan of Pasadena was third at 151.

The 54-hole tournament ends today.

Radio group hosting race

On Sunday the Pomona Radio Operated Club of Auto Racing (PROCAR) will host the first of five series races for ⅛ scale radio controlled, Open Wheeled (Formula) race cars.

The cars, powered by model airplane engines, reach speeds of 40-45 miles per hour.

Racing this Sunday will be held on a six turn road course at Thorp's R-C Raceway, located at 350 E. Commercial, Pomona. Practice gets under way at noon on Saturday with racing starting at 11 a.m. Sunday.

Moffitt captured the eight-mile race, which started at the ski lift parking lot and concluded at the top of the peak, in 63.28.
